HISTORY OF THE HEFLEY AND WALCHER FAMILY
from the writings of Jesse L. Hefley
(1st. cousin of C.D.L. Walcher)

"For the pioneer urge had been strong in the Hefley's and the Walchers for generations. They had come, originally just two small families, from Germany and settled, along with a group of German families, in Pennsylvania, Family legend has it that an epidemic of some sort developed on board ship. The Hefley father died, leaving his wife and little boy; the Walcher mother also died, leaving her husband and two or three small children. Some time later, having arrived and settled in their new homes, the remaining parents married each other," In telling this story my mother (Aunt Clementine Walcher Hefley) would always end wth,"and it was from that one little boy that all the Hefleys in Americe are descended.

Be that as it may, the German colony, or a portion of it, migrated in a generation to North Carolina and thence to Illinois. And it was to Illinois, in Montgomery Co. that my father (Uncle Lemuel Hefley) returned after the Civil War, to select a bride from amoug the Walchers, and to settle down to farming, the traditional family vocation. It was there I was born, but my earliest recallections are of preparation for departure to a new land and a better life.

Kansas had been much in the news, during the war and after;(1871) It seemed to be the frontier of the day---so to Kansas we were bound. Father, Mother, Henry, Hank and Jesse and a distant cousin of Mothers, Joe Rumpel,. Took the ferry across the Mississippi at St Louis with wagon and team of horses. First settled in Howard Co. "We fared better than many of the settlers because my father was a hunter." The timber and creek bottoms abounded with game of many sorts. Father owned an old long squirrel rifle and he used it with great success. Much of the time we had a freshly killed carcass of deer hanging about the place--also wild turkey, squirrels, rabbits, quail, prairie chickens, ducks and geese all from time to time--paid tribute to his marksmanship. Fish too!

Traded home and land in Howard Co. Kansas,to a roving preacher(Disciple Church or Campbellete), for a home in Woodson Co.(Belmont Kansas) Big white two story house and was postmaster there.(Great Uncle Lemuel). House also served as Wayside Inn.

1874--grasshopper year--swarms numbered in billions--ate everything in their path.

"John Walcher-nephew of my mother had gone out to Kansas from Illinois, 1873, and taken a claim in Sumner Co. (Merle Walcher lives now) He was caught in the sweep of grasshoppers and was wiped out, so in the late summer he loaded his family in a covered wagon and came to Belmont to spend the winter with us. There was his wife Cora, and two small children--Albert and Hattie.

I think the relatives were discovering that we had a big house. A brother of my mother,Henry,(John Henry my grandfather), a minister of the Evangelical Lutheran Church(Missouri Synod) had been living and preaching in western Missouri and Eastern Kansas(Jefferson Co.) He died suddenly leaving a widow and five small boys and little in the way of support.(A.M.B. and his brothers.) They had drifted back to the family in Illinois and later to the Welker home near Perryville Missouri.

For some reason Aunt Lucretia(Ferns grandmother)(Elizabeth Lucretia Welker Walcher) determined to head west and arrangements were made for them to spend the winter with us. My father took his wagon and team and went over into Missouri to meet them and bring them home. Someone from the old neighborhood in Perryville, Mo. brought them part way. The clan was gathering and the big house was bulging. We boys who were old enough all went to a little school there in the bush about a mile from our village.

John Walcher seemed not to have become discouraged by the grasshoppers experience and planned to go back to his Sumner Co. claim in the spring. There was unoccupied land there to be had for the taking, and a dollar and a quarter an acre due and payable before the claim could be proved up. My fathers eyes glowed as the folks would sit around the fire and discuss the possibilities. John Walcher and Pa(Uncle Lem) went during the winter to see it. (Sumner Co.) He filed on a quarter section adjoining Johns place and came home determined to move in the spring.

"We had two Albert Walchers with us now. One was John Walcher's boy and the other Aunt Lucretia's oldest boy,about 14 , or five years older than I." He was already his mothers right arm and s real man in his household.(A.M.B. Walcher)

The two Alberts, having been brought together at our place, something had to be done to distinguish them,so they become, and so remained, Big Al and Little Al, based upon their ages.

"The Hefley's and John Walcher families along with U.S. Walcher, one of Aunt Lucretia's boys, set out for Sumner Co. We had two wagons and 8 head of milk cows. U.S. came along to help with the cows. Aunt Lucretia and the rest of her family were to come later.

"Our nearest Post Office was South Haven(5 miles southeast) but Wellington was the County seat. It was 10 miles north and a little east. Both had been established only 2 or 3 years before. 1871. The railroads had not yet come closer than Wichita--so those little towns did not serve as marketing points for settlers crops.

"Aunt Lucretia Walcher and her boys came down from Woodson Co. Kans. and were able to settle on a partially improved place near us. Our reports went back to Illinois and several more families came. The Blackwelders, the Granthams, the Poppewells, the Ridenours, the Whitakers and several other Walcher families--the Harkeys--all relatives or acquantances from Montgomery Co. Illinois, moved in to increase our group. In time the whole community became known as the Illinois neighborhood. Buffalo bones were picked up, sold and shipped east to be ground into meal for fertilizer.(a means of livelyhood) sold prairie chickens too and used also for food. Planted corn first spring by chopping slits in ground with an axe and dropping in grains. It produced amazingly in the new sod without cultivation. Watermelons, canteloupe, pumpkins, squash,piemelons and citrons, planted like the corn, grew like weeds. We hauled them in by wagon loads, piled the surplus by the cow lot and fed it to the stock until mid-winter. Started a small orchard. Sent back to Illinois for Osage Orange seed(hedge) and planted small nursery patch--later to be transplanted and used as fences. Also served as windbreaks and shelter for small game and birds.

"Hank Hefley and I, together with several of the Walcher boys were in Shoofly bottom on a rabbit hunt in the snow. We stopped in the creek bottom since there was timber there, had built a fire and were just sitting around relaxing and talking. The dogs uncovered and killed a big woods rat. Someone proposed we cook it and find out how a rat tasted. I skinned it and was principle chef. We cut it into small pieces and toasted it over the fire on sticks. We decided the meat was alright, but since we had no salt it was not very palatable."

"Later we were down in Indian territory on a hunt. Pa had brought Hank and Me and Albert Walcher(A.M.B.) (tho' he never hunted much,) had brought his wagon with his brother Ben and cousin Tom Wynn. We camped out for the night, having enough water for supper, but none for breakfast. We started out the next morning for water and a permanent camp site, leaving the wagons. Hank and I were back by noon--having had no luck--Pa wasn't back yet--everyone else was tired,hungry and impatient. A big hawk lit in a tree near by and one of the boys killed it. We had nothing better to do so we dressed and cooked it as we had the rat only this time we had salt, but we decided neither salt, sauce nor masters touch could ever make that bird good to eat. Sinilarly, at one time or another, we tried nearly everything that grew. We had heard the Indians ate everything and we thought we were as good as the Indians!"

"Some of us took seriously to the business of learning to walk a tight rope. We never progressed to the point of getting the rope high in the air, but Charlie Walcher and I did get a fair job of staying on it.

"Deb Whitten used to come to our house to spark Dorcas Grantham (a girl helping mother with the housework.)

"Cheverie" Even good middle aged farmers such as my father joined the all male party(except the bride and maybe one of the mothers) for the Cheverie. Father was with us the night Beaman Smith got married. U.S.Walcher had married Beamans sister not so long before so Beaman was sort of kinfolks.

"A little later(in late1870's) a special school district was created and a new school built a mile north of our farm. This became Illinois school, so named because so many of the families had come from that state."

My father was on the first school board. Quite a controversy arose over the location and it was built in the middle of the section. A few years later a new board decided to move it down to the east corner where it would have cross-roads serving it in all directions. Fearing the displeasure and possible restraint of the faction made its plans and had it moved and in place during the night. The building sets there yet. They were more than just school houses, They were community houses and social centers for the district--also used for religious services, serving all dimonimations.

Hank, Charlie Walcher and Bert Barringer were in a blackface skit called "Old dismal from Dismal Swamp." Old Dismal played by Charlie, was just that."

We were heading home from one of these entertainments, a bunch of us with U.S. Walcher driving. He had a strawberry roan mare and our old Dolly hitched to a wagon--raced Rue Chenowith and his team of mules.

"Throughout all the differences in religious beliefs there has run a common thread of basic truth. I believe profoundly in the Christian religion. I think it is the most powerful, the most miraculous, and altogether the most wonderful force the world has known" J.L.Hefley

"The Traveling Evanglists came into the country and created quite an interest. My cousin(Big Al) (A.N.B.) became converted to this movement and offered himself as a candidate for baptism. These people were not only immersionists, but for all practical purposes, believed that baptism within itself contained the saving grace. This made it necessary that baptism be performed at once; otherwise a willing soul might be lost.

It happened that Al chose a poor time of the year to accept the call. It was mid-winter and the creek was frozen over with six inches of ice. But what mattered ice and weather! There was a baptising to be done. They chopped out a hole and the minister stood on the edge, held Al's hands and helped him slide off into the water. It was almost neck deep. They paused a minute while the ceremony was read and Al was pushed out of sight beneath the water. When he came out he looked and acted like he was nearly frozen but when someone asked if he were cold he said,"No, I hardly felt it."

I would be the last to say he did. Al was a perfectly sane and normal young man, practical and level headed far in advance of his years. But odd things happened and do happen under the banner of religion.

"One of the Walcher boys, Uncle Ben, was for years my fathers most faithful companion in the hunt. Older than I and less addicted to school, he got the jump on me by quite a little. I recall one trip the two of them made into the Territory when they spent 2 weeks and brought back 303 prairie chickens. These netted well over $100., good pay in those days. Another time the two of them brought in 5 antelope and six deer, besides some turkeys. This meant big money for us.

In the fall of 1887 ther was just nothing left to do but to sell out and give up our farm. We were deeply in debt--the farm having always been mortgaged. John A. Walcher took over the farm and its mortgages. John later did not want the farm and resold it to Charlie Walcher. After two or three years Charlie gave up and let the place go to his brother Al. (Ferns father)

Big Al (A.M.B.) was one of the few who never let the country lick him. The oldest of a family of five orphan boys, he worked hard and from early boyhood helped support himself and his brothers. He gave up most of the pleasures we others enjoyed in our youth, but his little place on the knoll across the creek prospered. While still a very young man he began to acquire these additional properties from families which has to give up. He took over the Barrringer place across the road from us, a school section and several other farms in the community. He had little more cash than the rest of us, but could get most of the property by merely assuming a debt. Somehow he managed to make the payments and eventually came out on top.

We Hefley's went to Arkansas City and from our Sumner Co. farm and then to Norman Okla.--still all unsettled except for the Indians.

"I decided to give up the hunting in January for a term in school, but Pa and Hank continued. Ben Walcher was with them, also. We had written him of our decision to spend the winter hunting and Ben was never one to let even one hunting expedition get away from him. So he spent the winter with us.

Sometime during that year Charlie D.L.Walcher had heard of, and made arrangements to attend school at Ft Scott,. It was a dinominational school known as the Ft Scott Normal College.1888. Actually was hardly a college and we certainly were not ready for college work, but Charlie go up there and liked what he found. He began writing me and urging me to come.

Some Past History of the Walcher Family

The Walcher family came originally from Germany, first settling in Pennsylvania. Later they migrated to North Carolina and then to Montgomery Co. Illinois. Grandfather John Henry Walcher married Elizabeth Lucretia Welker. They were both born in the 1830's. The Welker home was located near Perryville, Missouri. Grandfather John H. Walcher enlisted in the Civil War, with the Union Forces, October 18, 1861, serving in Company F, 5th Regiment, Infantry, Missourd Volunteers. He served only a short time, being discharged because of poor eyesight. He then studied for the ministry and became a Lutheran Minister. He came to Jefferson, County Kansas where he farmed and preached. It was there he died and is buried there.

Grandmother Lucretia Walcher took her little family of boys back to the Welker home in Missouri for a time. They also spent some time with relatives in Hillsboro, Illinois, Later they came to Woodson, Co. Kansas to spend a winter with the Hefleys. Great Aunt Clementine Hefley was a sister of Grandfather John H. Walcher.

Kansas was much in the news at that time as a new frontier, with land to be had for the taking plus a dollar and a quarter an acre. So in April of 1875, the Hefley family, a Cousin John Walcher and family and Grandmother Lucretia Walcher with her boys, came to Sumner County, Ten miles south of Wellington and filed their claims. The Hefleys lived where Bob Walcher now lives, the John Walchers across the road and Grandmother Lucretia settled on a partially improved place in the section where Albert M. B. Walcher lived for many years. They came by covered wagon some pulled by oxed, driving 8 head of milk cows. South Haven was their Post Office and Wellington was the County seat. The railroad was no closer than Wichita.

Several other families who came to settle in the same community were, the Popplewells, Granthams, Harkeys, Ridenours and Whittens. Some of them relatives of the Walchers. So many came from Illinois that the community and later the school became known as Illinois.

Some of their early experiences in their new homes are interesting. They told of Picking up buffalo bones to be sold, shipped out, and ground into fertilizer. They went down into Indian Territory and hauled out wood, some to be sold, and some used in their buildings. That first spring they planted corn by chopping slits in the ground with an ax, then dropping in the grain. It produced amazingly in the new sod without cultivation. Watermilons, cantelope, pumpkins, squash and citrons planted like the corn grew like weeds. They started a small orchard and sent back to Illinois for Osage Orange seed (hedge) and planted a small nursery--- later transplanting it and using it for fences.

Great Uncle Lem Hefley was a hunter and kept the families supplied with meat as well as helping with their livelihood. He used to go down into "Indian Territory" now Oklahoma to hunt. He took some of his own boys as well as Albert M. B., Ben and U.S. Walcher and their Cousin Tom Wynn. Uncle Ben Walcher was for many years a faithful companion of Uncle Lem Hefley on his hunting expeditions. On one of those trips they brought back 303 prairie chickens. These netted over $100.00, which was good pay in those days. Another time they brought back 5 antelope, 6 deer and some turkeys, which meant food for all and big money.

The boys spent some time fishing and playing on "Shoofly" creek west of their homes. Cousin Jesse Hefley told of some of their pranks. Once they roasted a woodrat and a hawk. They did not find either very palatable, but they had heard that the Indians ate most everything, so decided to try it too. Jesse Hefley and Uncle Charles D. L. Walcher tried to learn to walk a tight rope, but were never able to get very high off the ground.

They told of going to a Chavari for Beaman Smiths. Uncle U.S. Walcher had married Beamans sister so he was sort'a kinfolks.

Grandmother Lucretia Walcher died in 1878 leaving five orphan boys. Albert M. B., BenjemanI., Andrew U.S., Charles D. L., and Rush Q.

Great Aunt Eliza Welker came from Missouri to keep house for the boys, Uncle Charlie and Uncle Rush both lived with neighbor families, Working for their board and room. The story has been told of Uncle Rush having to pick up cobs in freezing weather and thereby losing several toes. There was not much schooling for those boys, but Uncle Charlie Walcher and Jesse Hefley did attend Ft. Scott Normal College in 1888.

In January 1883 Albert M.B, Walcher went back to Perryville Missouri and married Lidonia Alice Wynn, whom he had met there while staying in his Grandparents, the Welkers, home. They rode into Perryville on horseback, with the rest of the Wynn family coming in the wagon for the ceremony. After the wedding they rode on a steamboat up the Mississippi river to St. Louis and took the train from there to Wellington, Kansas. Some of the boys met them in a wagon to take them to their home.

Uncle U.S. Walcher married Clara B. Smith in 1887.

Uncle Charles Daniel Lincoln Walcher married Jennie M. Paddock at Raymond, Illinois in January 1890.

Uncle Rush Q. Walcher married Carrie Alderson in October, 1893.

Uncle Benjiman I. Walcher remained a batchelor.

OPENING OF THE STRIP SEPTEMBER 16, 1893 Jesse L. Hefley

We had grown to maturity in Southern Kansas near the border of the "Strip" We had hunted it for years and knew it as we would our own farm, We all liked it and were determined to secure some homsteads there.

Jesse and Hank hefley were to ride horses. Ben Walcher had a team "Bill and Babe" He would ride Bill. That left Babe - but two more horses were needed, one for Pa (Lem Hefley) and a team for the wagon.

Several weeks were spent in training our mounts. Extra rations of oats, extra grooming, and long daily rides at a fast pace gradually put them in top condition.

Big Al Walcher (A.M.B.) was going to ridewith us and two of the Wynn boys. Little Ed Wynn would drive another supply wagon. Rush Walcher owned a big, strong two year old he would send along for Pa (Lem Hefley) to ride - and Al brought an extra to put in our team with Babe..

Some years before our departure from the farm in Kansas Al Walcher had married Lidonia A. Wynn. We had known all the family of old, but this in a sense, made them (the Wynns) our relatives as well

We were all set, a party of eight riders and two wagons. Lemuel Hefley, Jesse and Hank Hefley, Al and Ben Walcher, Tom and Ed Wynn and Charley Kahoe.. And there was reason for the large group. Our experiences in previous openings had proven the value of witnesses.

The land office in Washington decreed that all who were to enter, must register ahead of the run and must carry on their persons certificates of that registration - on the day of the opening and when filing upon the land. The old border town of Hunnewell, Kansas was one of several designated points and it was there we decided to go.

There were thousands of people there, and I suspect a great many more than had been anticipated. We arrived before the registration started, but the crowd was so large that the work went very slowly. The long lines of people were organized into companies of 25 with a Captain for each company. This enabled the members of each group to mantain their positions in line by a single representative, while the rest were free to come and go as they pleased.

I was appointed captain of a group which included our party. We had to camp there in line for the first day and night and into the next afternoon. We accomplishhd the enrollment in time that day to get our outfit assembled and moved to a point on the border some ten miles east of Hunnewell.Here we rested in camp the last night before the opening and were in good shape, and position to begin the big race.

The morning of the opening dawned clear, calm and warm; a little too warm for the tremendous ordeal of violent action that lay before us. We were aware of the weaknesses of horse flesh and thought we knew how to spare our mounts as well as the next man.

We inquired of riders coming in as to whether the regristration ever was completed. The report was that it had been, but that the booths had stayed open all night to accomplish it.

The authorities had designated a neutral strip of land a hundred feet wide just over the state line on which all participants might assemble. This was to avoid as machaas possible any damage to the property of individuals in the state of Kansas and to provide starting places for all - of as nearly equal convience as possible.

We happened to be located near the top of a ridge which afforded us an excellent view of the multitude for at least a half mile in both directions. The neutral strip seemed completely filled with people, horses and vehicles of one kind and another - as far as we could see. There were many excellent horses, thoroughbreds - trained for the job ahead and far better than any we could boast. There were also draft horses off the farms, quite unfit for the race. There were many light vehicles, two and four wheeled, some with one horse drawing them, some with two. A few men were on bicycles.

At twelve o'clock the signal guns were fired and the whole mass sprang into motion. A truly great spectacle, such as one is likely to see only once in a lifetime. Here and there a single rider dashed quickly ahead, but for the most part the mass moved out with a kind of regularity and restrained speed that seemed to say "We know we are in for a great race and much will depend upon how we ride it"

As for our own party - our agreement to stay together was not as easy of accomplishment as one might suppose. Rush's young horse made trouble for Pa at once. He was highly bred and inclined to nervousness, and was scared of the great crowd and confusion. He went off with an uncontrolable dash - that carried him clear of the crowd and of us. Pa reported he had been in the clear, well out in front of everyone, before he could take charge and slow down.

Hank's horse, too, was a problem. Insufficiently broken, a little Indian pony, sh. went wild in the melee of getting under way and tried to both throw her rider and to run away with him. But Hank was equal to the occasion and able to keep his seat and regain control.

We got together and progressed calmly and steadily, mostly at a long lope, that ate up the miles.

About six or seven miles into the race we came across a man standing beside the trail. A horse which was unable to rise lay on the ground beside him. We drew rein to see if our help was needed, but he simply waved us on and shouted; "Don't mind me, Boys, thank you. I will hold this claim right here if I can. Go right on, and good luck to you!"!

His horse had stepped into a ditch beside the road, had fallen and broken a leg. It would never get up. We saw the man no more.

Ten or twelve miles along we came upon a large work horse lying dead by the trail. No owner was in sight, apparently he had gone on afoot. A great many horses, both good and bad went out the same way - that day.

After a half hour or so we began to notice that every time we passed a little creek or a clump of brush we would find horses running beside us which had not been there before. These animals were hardly sweating at all while ours was in a lather. We soon began to understand that the regristration plan had failed miserably in its purpose: that men who had registered the first day, or the second, had departed quietly and for two days had been slipping over the border and hiding out in secluded spots. From those stations they could emergeunobserved and join the rush as it swept past. Thus, while starting on a par with the leaders of the crowd they had fresh horses to give them a great advantage.

However, these were the timid Sooners. Their bolder brothers were yet out in front. At the end of an hour of riding we reached the Chickaskia river just north of where the city of Blackwell, Oklahoma now stands. We rode into the water, dismounted and wet the mouths and heads of our horses. They were too hot and excited to drink, but we let them breathe while we counciled as to the next move.

We had expected this to be near the end of our journey. We hAD THOUGHT WE WOULD SPREAD OUT and find claims in this valley and we knew we had ridden well ahead of the crowd. But we only had to look around to see that we were not. All the bottom land seemed covered three and four deep already. These people could not have started at the border at twelve as we did. Most of them could not even be those who had joined us along the way. They had beaten us to the desirable farms, but most of them had been there well ahead of our start at the Kansas line.

This was a bitter disappointment to us all. Al and the others from Kansas decided they had gone far enough, if they could find no claim in this bottom they did not want one at all. We left them there to turn up river and spent the rest of the day in an effort to uncover something the crowd might have overlooked.

The rest of us wanted to push on. We had come too far and worked too hard to be willing to admit defeat this early in the game. It was another ten or twelve miles straight ahead to the Salt Fork. So we were off in a few minutes on the second leg of the journey.

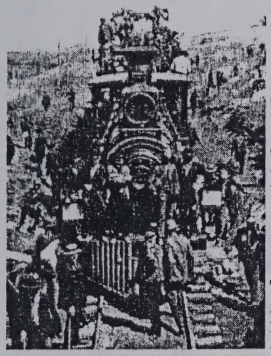
"The Cherokee Strip"

The 226-mile tract known as the Cherokee Strip is much more than a parcel of land. It was the setting for the largest, most spectacular competitive event in history -- the Cherokee Strip Land Run of 1893. Cities and towns grew from the dust of that great race, and today their amazing story can still be heard across the Oklahoma plains.



Oklahoma's Cherokee Strip is one of the few places where the pioneer spirit that settled American is still vibrant enough to experience. Feel it in the wind that sweeps through tallgrass prairies and fields of wheat. See it in the faces of those who live and work on the land their ancestors dreamed of owning when they mounted their horses, buggies and even bicycles and trains, to make the last great race for land on that hot and dusty afternoon of September 16, 1893. This is a story of drama, perserverance, hope and above all, dreams.

The Land

The Cherokee Strip extends 226 miles from east to west and 58 miles north to south -- larger than the states of Connecticut, Deleware and Rhode Island combined. Thirteen northern counties and 9,400 miles make up Oklahoma's portion of the Cherokee Strip, historically designated as the Cherokee Outlet. Looking across the vast horizon of the Cherokee Strip, it's easy to imagine the thousands of buffalo that once roamed the open plains. It is a land as diverse as America itself, with rolling Osage prairies in the east to gypsum sand dunes and the rugged Glass Mountains in the west.

American Indians In The Strip

Although the flags of many countries have flown symbolically over the untamed lands of the Cherokee Strip, American Indians were its original owners. In 1828, the U.S. government gave the land to the Cherokees, calling the area the Cherokee Outlet because the tribe could cross freely to hunting grounds in the west. The Cherokees were assigned lands in northeastern Oklahoma (then Indian Territory), and never lived in the Cherokee Strip.

In 1866, the United States asked the Cherokees to sell portions of the Strip to "friendly" Indians. Tribes or parts of tribes, such as Osage, Pawnee, Kaw, Ponca, Tonkawa, Nez Perce, Otoe and Missouria, settled in the region. When the Strip was opened to white settlement, tribes living there -- with the exception of the Nez Perce, who were previously moved to their Oregon homeland -- were sold individual allotments not to exceed 80 acres, half of the allotment amount offered to settlers who made the run. Museums and attractions throughout the Cherokee Strip tell the poignant story of American Indians and how their cultures and spirituality have persevered during the last 100 years.

The Cattle Trails

After the Civil War, Texas had some six million head of longhorn cattle but virtually no market for the beef. Demand for their product by hungry Easterners led Texas ranchers to drive their cattle through the Cherokee Strip to railhead markets in Kansas and Missouri. Several cattle trails crossed the Outlet, but the best known is the namesake of Jesse Chisholm, a Scotch and Cherokee trader. Chisholm made his first trip up the trail in 1865, and millions of cattle thundered across the Strip over the next 20 years, driven by men who had spurred a new occupation -- the cowboy. Remnants of the famous Chisholm Trail can still be found across the Cherokee Strip. In 1993, at the commemoration of the Centennial Anniversary of the opening of the Strip, this colorful era returned when many people participated in cattle drives, wagon trains and trail rides that made their way through the region.

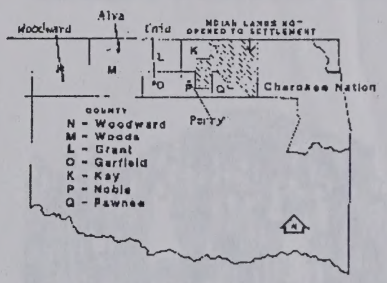
The Great Ranches

When it became obvious raising cattle on the lush grass of the Outlet was more profitable than driving herds from Texas, sprawling ranches appeared in the Strip. In 1883 the Cherokee Strip Livestock Association was formed and six million acres were leased from the Cherokees. Seven years later, President Benjamin Harrison ordered the ranchers to remove all cattle from the Strip. Plans were in place to open the expansive ranchlands for settlement by eager pioneers.

The Race

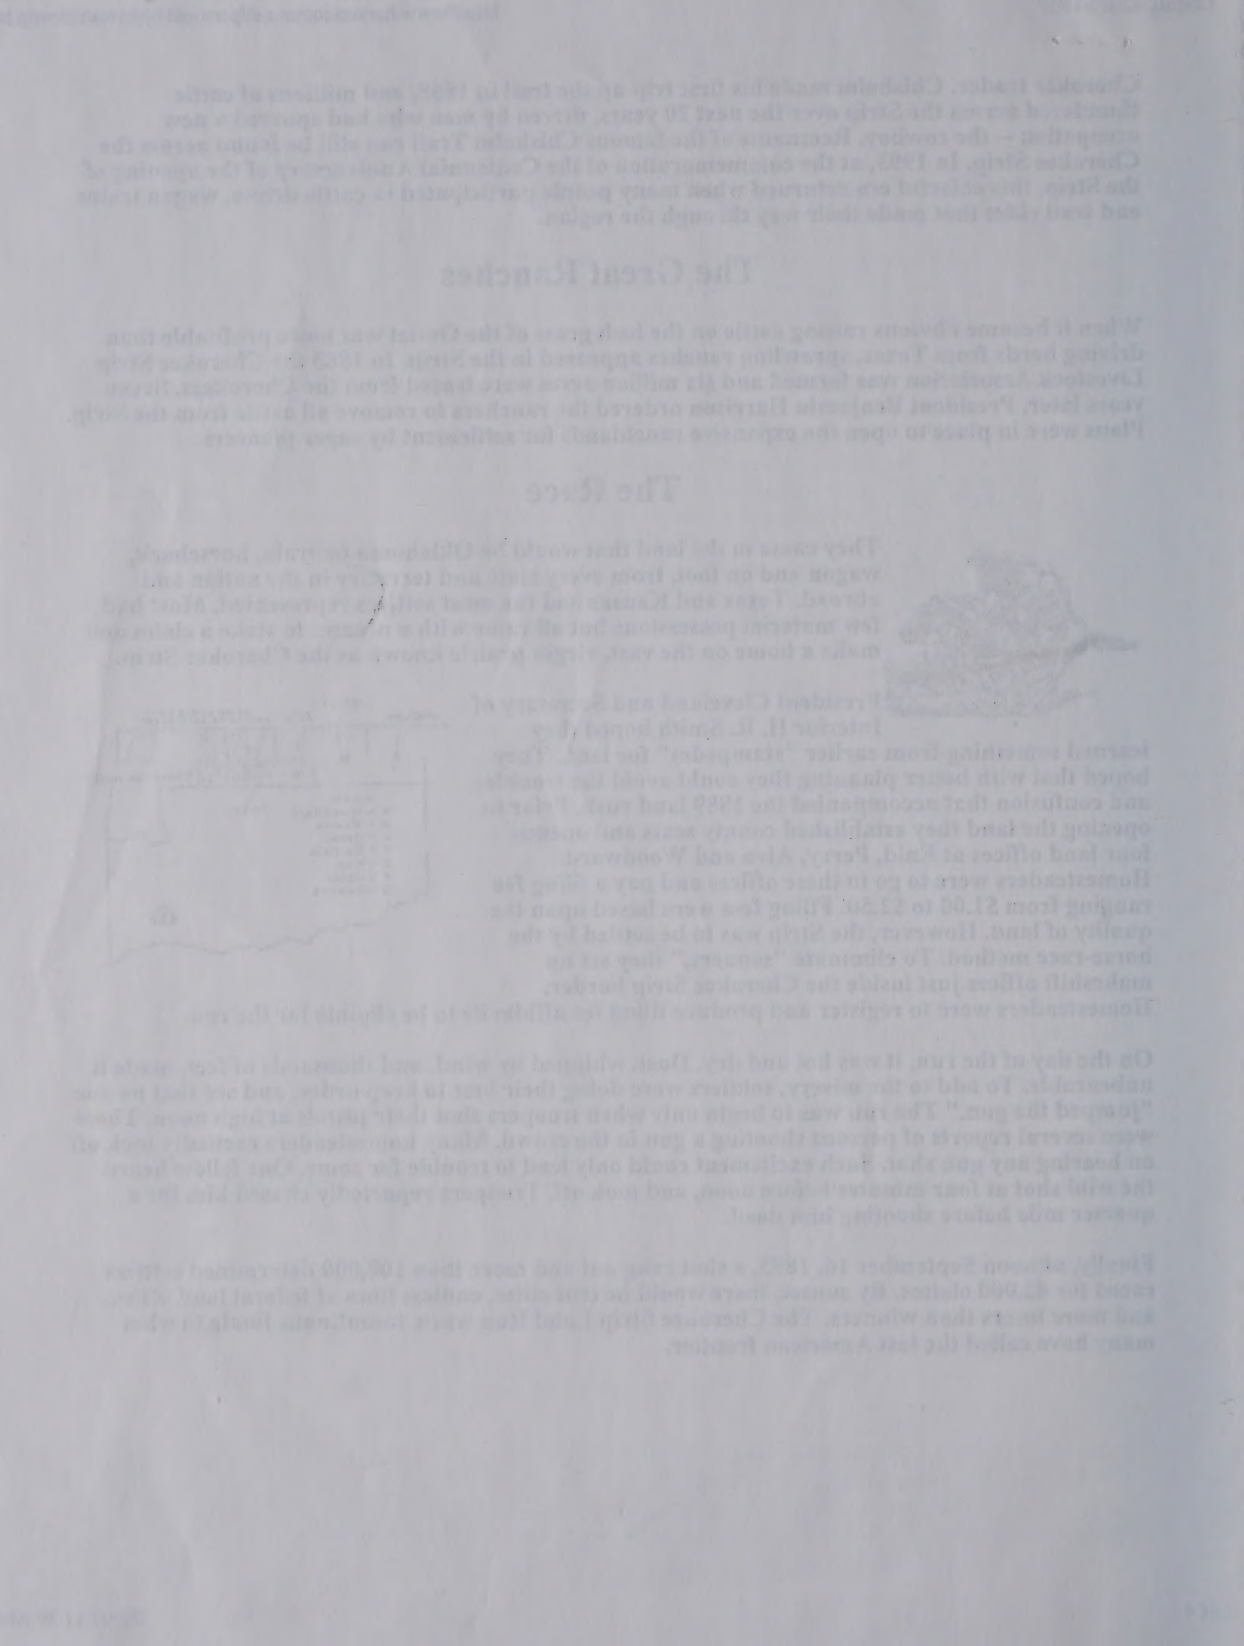
They came to the land that would be Oklahoma by train, horseback, wagon and on foot, from every state and territory in the nation and abroad. Texas and Kansas had the most settlers represented. Most had few material possessions but all came with a dream: to stake a claim and make a home on the vast, virgin prairie known as the Cherokee Strip.

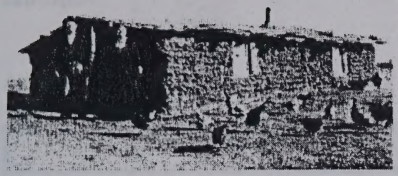


President Cleveland and Secretary of Interior H. R. Smith hoped they learned something from earlier "stampedes" for land. They hoped that with better planning they could avoid the troubles and confusion that accompanied the 1889 land rush. Prior to opening the land they established county seats and opened four land offices at Enid, Perry, Alva and Woodward. Homesteaders were to go to these offices and pay a filing fee ranging from $1.00 to $2.50. Filing fees were based upon the quality of land. However, the Strip was to be settled by the horse-race method. To eliminate "sooners," they set up makeshift offices just inside the Cherokee Strip border. Homesteaders were to register and produce filing fee affidavits to be eligible for the run.

On the day of the run, it was hot and dry. Dust, whipped by wind, and thousands of feet, made it unbearable. To add to the misery, soldiers were doing their best to keep order, and see that no one "jumped the gun." The run was to begin only when troopers shot their pistols at high noon. There were several reports of persons shooting a gun in the crowd. Many homesteaders excitedly took off on hearing any gun shot. Such excitement could only lead to trouble for some. One fellow heard the wild shot at four minutes before noon, and took off. Troopers reportedly chased him for a quarter mile before shooting him dead.

Finally, at noon September 16, 1893, a shot rang out and more than 100,000 determined settlers raced for 42,000 claims. By sunset, there would be tent cities, endless lines at federal land offices and more losers than winners. The Cherokee Strip Land Run was a tumultuous finale to what many have called the last American frontier.





Making the race and staking a claim must have seemed simple when compared to establishing a home in the sometimes formidable Cherokee Strip. Many settlers carved sod homes and dugouts from the prairie while others lived in their covered wagons. The first winters were harsh as the land tested the endurance and character of its new inhabitants. Many of the settlers could not endure the harsh conditions, and after weeks, or months, gave up their dream.

The hard times gave way to better days as crops flourished and communities, schools and churches rose from the windswept plains. Over 100 years later, agriculture remains the strenth of the economy and way of life. The stories of these brave homesteaders still echo through the Cherokee Strip. Walk through the only remaining sod house, explore the many Cherokee Strip Museums, or visit with people whose ancestors, through grit and determination, settled this untamed frontier.

Black Gold

With the first commercial oil well in 1897 came fortune seekers from around the world to strike it rich in the teeming oil fields. Many found and lost their wealth in the Cherokee Strip, and left a legacy of architecture, art and culture in towns like Barlesville, Ponca City and Enid. Today, the Strip's abundant oil reserves continue to make petroleum a dominant industry.

The Celebration

Towns, communities and schools throughout Oklahoma's Cherokee Strip celebrate the anniversary of the Land Run on September 16 with festivals, parades, and reenactments of the Race for Land, lest we forget why our ancestors traveled from far and away to stake a claim in history. Ancestors from the CUTTER, GIBSON and PIPER families all contributed to the settlement of the Cherokee Strip. Joseph P. Gibson and his brother-in-law, Simon Irey, husband of Ellen Cutter, made the run together, Joe riding a sorrel mule, and staked their claims east of Douglas, OK. John Piper and his family were here soon after the land was settled. None of those original pioneers are living today, but many of their descendants still live in the Cherokee Strip. Families whose members still live on the original claims are honored as "100 Year Families. In 1997, Everett Ray Cutter, will qualify as one of those families. He lives on the land of his Great-Grandmother, Caroline Fry Cutter. Winston Cutter also qualified in 1994 as one of those families.

OPENING OF THE STRIP SEPTEMBER 16, 1893 Jesse L, Hefley

We had grown to maturity in Southern Kansas near the border of the "Strip" We had hunted it for years and knew it as we would our own farm, We all liked it and were determined to secure some homsteads there.

Jesse and Hank hefley were to ride horses. Ben Walcher had a team "Bill and Babe" He would ride Bill. That left Babe - but two more horses were needed, one for Pa (Lem Hefley) and a team for the wagon.

Several weeks were spent in training our mounts. Extra rations of oats, extra grooming, and long daily rides at a fast pace gradually put them in top condition.

Big Al Walcher (A.M.B.) was going to ridewith us and two of the Wynn boys. Little Ed Wynn would drive another supply wagon. Rush Walcher owned a big, strong two year old he would send along for Pa (Lem Hefley) to ride - and Al brought an extra to put in our team with Babe..

Some years before our departure from the farm in Kansas Al Walcher had married Lidonia A. Wynn. We had known all the family of old, but this in a sense, made them (the Wynns) our relatives as well

We were all set, a party of eight riders and two wagons. Lemuel Hefley, Jesse and Hank Hefley, Al and Ben Walcher, Tom and Ed Wynn and Charley Kahoe.. And there was reason for the large group. Our experiences in previous openings had proven the value of witnesses.

The land office in Washington decreed that all who were to enter, must register ahead of the run and must carry on their persons certificates of that registration - on the day of the opening and when filing upon the land. The old border town of Hunnewell, Kansas was one of several designated points and it was there we decided to go.

There were thousands of people there, and I suspect a great many more than had been anticipated. We arrived before the registration started, but the crowd was so large that the work went very slowly. The long lines of people were organized into companies of 25 with a Captain for each company. This enabled the members of each group to mantain their positions in line by a single representative, while the rest were free to come and go as they pleased.

I was appointed captain of a group which included our party. We had to camp there in line for the first day and night and into the next afternoon. We accomplished the enrollment in time that day to get our outfit assembled and moved to a point on the border some ten miles east of Hunnewell.Here we rested in camp the last night before the opening and were in good shape, and position to begin the big race.

The morning of the opening dawned clear, calm and warm; a little too warm for the tremendous ordeal of violent action that lay before us. We were aware of the weaknesses of horse flesh and thought we knew how to spare our mounts as well as the next man.

We inquired of riders coming in as to whether the regristration ever was completed. The report was that it had been, but that the booths had stayed open all night to accomplish it.

The authorities had designated a neutral strip of land a hundred feet wide just over the state line on which all participants might assemble. This was to avoid as muchaas possible any damage to the property of individuals in the state of Kansas and to provide starting places for all - of as nearly equal convience as possible.

We happened to be located near the top of a ridge which afforded us an excellent view of the multitude for at least a half mile in both directions. The neutral strip seemed completely filled with people, horses and vehicles of one kind and another - as far as we could see. There were many excellent horses, thoroughbreds - trained for the job ahead and far better than any we could boast. There were also draft horses off the farms, quite unfit for the race. There were many light vehicles, two and four wheeled, some with one horse drawing them, some with two. A few men were on bicycles.

At twelve o'clock the signal guns were fired and the whole mass sprang into motion. A truly great spectacle, such as one is likely to see only once in a lifetime. Here and there a single rider dashed quickly ahead, but for the most part the mass moved out with a kind of regularity and restrained speed that seemed to say "We know we are in for a great race and much will depend upon how we ride it"

As for our own party - our agreement to stay together was not as easy of accomplishment as one might suppose. Rush's young horse made trouble for Pa at once. He was highly bred and inclined to nervousness, and was scared of the great crowd and confusion. He went off with an uncontrolable dash - that carried him clear of the crowd and of us. Pa reported he had been in the clear, well out in front of everyone, before he could take charge and slow down.

Hank's horse, too, was a problem. Insufficiently broken, a little Indian pony, sh. went wild in the melee of getting under way and tried to both throw her rider and to run away with him. But Hank was equal to the occasion and able to keep his seat and regain control.

We got together and progressed calmly and steadily, mostly at a long lope, that ate up the miles.

About six or seven miles into the race we came across a man standing beside the trail. A horse which was unable to rise lay on the ground beside him. We drew rein to see if our help was needed, but he simply waved us on and shouted; "Don't mind me, Boys, thank you. I will hold this claim right here if I can. Go right on, and good luck to you!"

His horse had stepped into a ditch beside the road, had fallen and broken a leg. It would never get up. We saw the man no more.

Ten or twelve miles along we came upon a large work horse lying dead by the trail. No owner was in sight, apparently he had gone on afoot. A great many horses, both good and bad went out the same way - that day.

1. MARGARET "CLEMENTINE"[4] WALCHER (JOHN MICHAEL[3], MICHAEL[2], ADAM[1]) was born 04 March 1842 in Montgomery County, Illinois, and died 12 December 1920 in Commanche County, Oklahoma. She married JEFFERSON L. "LEM" HEFLEY 12 October 1865 in Montgomery County, Illinois[1], son of TILMAN HEFLEY and DELILAH LIPE. He was born 20 January 1839 in Montgomery County, Illinois[2], and died 16 May 1925 in Norman, Cleveland, Oklahoma[2].

MRS. J. L. HEFLEY
Mrs. J.L. Hefley died at her home in Post Oak district at 1:00 p.m. Sunday, December 12, of cancer of the stomach. Funeral services were held at the home Monday afternoon and the body was shipped Tuesday morning to Norman for burial. Mrs. Hefley leaves a husband, four sons and four daughters, all of whom were with her during her last illness. She was 78 years, 9 months and 4 days of age. She was a Christian, a member of the M.E. Church and a devoted wife and mother. Those attending the funeral from here were Ellis Lee, his mother, Mrs. Lee, Mrs. Nat Lewis and Mrs. J.T. Nelms.

Notes for JEFFERSON L. "LEM" HEFLEY:
HISTORY OF THE HEFLEY AND WALCHER FAMILY - (From the writings of Jesse L. Hefley)
"For the pioneer urge had been strong in the Hefleys and the Walchers for generations. They had come, originally just two small families, from Germany and settled, along with a group of German families, in Pennsylvania. Family legend has it that an epidemic of some sort developed on board ship. The Hefley father died, leaving his wife and little boy; the Walcher mother also died, leaving her husband and two or three small children. Some time later, having arrived and settled in their new homes, the remaining parents married each other. In telling this story my mother, Clementine Walcher Hefley would always end with, "and it was from that one little boy that all the Hefleys in America are descended".
Be that as it may, the German colony, or a portion of it, migrated in a generation to North Carolina and thence to Illinois. And it was to Illinois, in Montgomery Co. that my father (Lem Hefley) returned after the Civil War, to select a bride from the Missouri Walchers, and to settle down to farming, the traditional family vocation. It was there I was born, but my earliest recollections are of preparation for departure to a new land and a better life.
Kansas had been much in the news, during the war and after 1871. It seemed to be the frontier of the day--so to Kansas we were bound--Father, Mother, Henry, Hank and Jesse and a distant cousin of mother's, Joe Rumpel. We took the ferry across the Mississippi at St Louis with a wagon and team of horses. First settled in Howard County. "We fared better than many of the settlers because my father was a hunter." The timber and creek bottoms abounded with game of many sorts. Father owned an old long squirrel rifle and he used it with great success. Much of the time we had a freshly killed carcass of deer hanging about the place--also wild turkey, squirrels, rabbits, quail, prairie chickens, ducks and geese all from time to time--paid tribute to his marksmanship. Fish too!
We traded home and land in Howard County, Kansas, to a roving preacher (Disciple Church or Campbellite), for a home in Woodson County (Belmont, Kansas). It was a big white two-story house and Father (Lem) was postmaster there. The house also served as wayside inn. In 1874 came the grasshopper year, swarms numbered in billions, eating everything in their path.
I think the relatives were discovering that we had a big house. A brother of my mother, John Henry Walcher, a minister of the Evangelical Lutheran Church, Missouri Synod, had been living and preaching in western Missouri and eastern Kansas (Jefferson County). He died suddenly leaving a widow and five small boys and little in the way of support. Aunt Lucretia Welker Walcher and the boys had drifted back to the family in Illinois and later to the Welker home near Perryville, Missouri. For some reason Aunt Lucretia was determined to head west and arrangements were made for them to spend the winter with us. My father took his wagon and team and went over into Missouri to meet them and bring them home. Someone from the old neighborhood in Perryville, brought them part way. The clan was gathering and the big house was bulging. We boys, who were old enough, all went to a little school there in the bush about a mile from our village.

Notes for JEFFERSON L. "LEE" HOLT, SR.:
HISTORY OF THE HEFLEY AND WALCHER FAMILY - (From the writings of Jesse L. Heflin)
"For the pioneer ones had been strong in the Heflys and the Walcher for generations. They had come originally just two small families, from Germany and settled, along with a group of German families, in Pennsylvania. Family legend has it that an epidemic of some sort developed on board ship. The Heflin father died, leaving his wife and little boy, the Walcher mother also died, leaving her husband and two or three small children. Soon time later, having arrived and settled in their new homes, the remaining parents married each other. In telling this story my mother, Clementine Walcher Heflin would always end with, "and it was from that one little boy that all the Heflys in America are descended."
Be that as it may, the German colony, or a portion of it, migrated to a generation to North Carolina and thence to Illinois. And it was to Illinois, in Montgomery Co. that my father (Lem Heflin) returned after the Civil War, to select a bride from the Missouri Walchers, and to settle down to farming, the traditional family vocation. It was there I was born, but my earliest recollections are of preparation for departure to a new land and a better life.
Kansas had been much in the news, during the war and after 1871. It seemed to be the frontier of the day--so to Kansas we were bound--Father, Mother, Henry, Hugh and Jesse and a distant cousin of mother's, Joe Trumpel. We took the ferry across the Mississippi at St. Louis with a wagon and team of horses. That settled in Howard County. "We hired better than many of the settlers because my father was a hunter." The timber and creek bottoms abounded with game of many sorts. Father owned an old long squirrel rifle and he used it with great success. Much of the time we had a freshly killed carcass of deer hanging about the place--also wild turkey, squirrels, rabbits, quail, prairie chickens, ducks and geese all from once to most--paid tribute to his marksmanship. That too!
We traded back and land in Howard County, Kansas, to a roving preacher (Disciple Church or Campbellite), for a home in Wooson County (Belmont, Kansas). It was a big white two-story house and Father (Lem) was postmaster there. The house also served as wayside inn. In 1874 came the grasshopper year, storms numbered in billions, eating every thing in their path.
I think the relatives were discovering that we had a big house. A brother of my mother, John Henry Walcher, a minister of the Evangelical Lutheran Church, Missouri Synod, had been living and preaching in western Missouri and eastern Kansas (Jefferson County). He died suddenly leaving a widow and five small boys and little in the way of support. Aunt Lucretia Walcher and the boys had drifted back to the family in Illinois and later to the Walcher home near Perrysville, Missouri. For some reason Aunt Lucretia was determined to head west and among points were made for them to spend the winter with us. My father took his wagon and team and went into Missouri to meet them and bring them home. Someone from the old neighborhood in Perrysville, Benajah Dunn put two, The elder was gardening and the big house was helping. We boys, who were old enough, all went to a little school there in the bush about a mile from our village.

John A. Walcher seemed not to have become discouraged by the grasshoppers experience and planned to go back to his Sumner County claim in the spring. There was unoccupied land there to be had for the taking at a dollar and a quarter an acre, due and payable before the claim could be proved up. My father's eyes glowed as the folks would sit around the fire and discuss the possibilities. John Walcher and Pa went during the winter to see the Sumner County claim. He filed on a quarter section adjoining John's place and came home determined to move in the spring.

"We had two Albert Walchers with us now. One was John Walcher's boy and the other Aunt Lucretia's oldest boy, (A.M.B.) about 14, or five years older than I." He was already his mother's right arm and a real man in his household. There were two Alberts, having been brought together at our place, something had to be done to distinguish them, so they became, and so remained, Big Al and Little Al, based upon their ages.

The Hefleys and John Walcher families along with U.S. Walcher, another of Aunt Lucretia's boys set out for Sumner County. We had two wagons and eight head of milk cows. U.S. came along to help with the cows--Aunt Lucretia and the rest of her family were to come later.

Our nearest Post Office was South Haven, five miles southeast, but Wellington was the county seat. Wellington was 10 miles north and a little east. Both towns had been established only two or three years before. The railroads had not yet come closer than Wichita--so those little towns did not serve as marketing points for settler's crops.

Aunt Lucretia Walcher and her boys came over from Woodson County, Kansas and were able to settle on a partially improved place near us. Our reports went back to Illinois and several more families came--the Blackwelders, the Granthams, the Poppewells, the Ridenours, the Whitakers and several other Walcher families--the Harkeys--all relatives or acquaintances from Montgomery County, Illinois moved in to increase our group. In time the whole community became known as the Illinois neighborhood. Buffalo bones were picked up, sold and shipped east to be ground into meal for fertilizer and a means of livelihood. Prairie chickens were sold too and were also used for food. We planted corn first spring by chopping slits in the ground with an axe and dropping in grains. It produced amazingly in the new sod without cultivation. Watermelons, cantaloupe, pumpkins, squash, pie melons and citrons, planted like the corn grew like weeds. We hauled them in by wagon loads, piled the surplus by the cow lot and under straw in the barn, then fed it to the stock until mid-winter. Also started a small orchard and sent back to Illinois for Osage orange seed. The seed produced a hedge plant that was planted in a small nursery patch, then later transplanted and used as fences. The fences served as windbreaks and shelter for small game and birds.

In the fall of 1887 there was just nothing left to do but to sell out and give up our farm. We were deeply in debt--the farm having always been mortgaged. John A. Walcher took over the farm and its mortgages. John later did not want the farm and resold it to C.D.L. (Charlie) Walcher, another of Aunt Lucretia's sons. After two or three years Charlie gave up and let the place go to his brother A.M.B.

Big Al (A.M.B) was one of the few who never let the country lick him. The oldest of a family of five orphan boys, he worked hard and from early boyhood helped support himself and his brothers. He gave up most of the pleasures we others enjoyed in our youth, but his little place on the knoll across the creek prospered. While still a very young man, he began to acquire these additional properties from families which had to give up. He took over the Barringer place across the road from us, a school section and several other farms in the community. He had little more cash than the rest of us, but could get most of the property by merely assuming a debt. Somehow he managed to make the payments and eventually came out on top. We Hefleys went to Arkansas City from our Sumner County farm and then to Norman Oklahoma-land still all unsettled except for the Indians.

In 1915 Jefferson L. Hefley and Margaret Clementine Walcher Hefley celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary and were married a total of 55 years when Clementine died.

OKC. It was titled "A Pioneer at the Land Openings in Oklahoma" by Maurice Hefley. This article has a picture of the Jefferson Hefley family taken in 1890 and a picture of the original farm cabin built in 1901 on the homestead in Comanche County, Oklahoma.

The following facts are found in a Nellie Hefley Lyle writing in the Pioneers of Cleveland County 1889-1907, pages 89-95, found in the Oklahoma Historical Society Library in OKC. This book is found on the shelves with the Cleveland County, Oklahoma information, Call #702,06,1971.1.
Jefferson Hefley enlisted in the Company E of the 1st Illinois Cavalry Regiment, Union Army as a volunteer in 1861. He was taken prisoner at Lexington, Missouri, paroled and sent home the same year.
In 1862, Jefferson joined an overland expedition to California where he worked in timbering and gold mining for a year, returning to Illinois by ship and train via the Isthmus of Panama and New York.
He was drafted back into the army in 1864 and served until the end of the war in 1865. After discharge he returned to Illinois and married.

In the book "Cleveland County - Pride of the Promised Land-An Illustrated History" by Bonnie Speer. The family of Jefferson is documented by Ms. Speer through interviews with Nellie Hefley Lyle. There is a picture of the Jefferson Hefley family taken in 1890, a picture of the Section House built in 1887 where the Hefley family lived (courtesy of a John Womack), and a picture of students who enrolled at OU the first year (lists John T. Hefley).

Wrote and published a book of poems "Apache Prophet and Shorter Poems, in 1941 by Oklahoma City University Press, Oklahoma City, OK found in the Oklahoma Historical Society Building, OKC. The preface to the book reads: ABOUT THE AUTHOR--Born in Montgomery county, Illinois, January 10, 1866, and but three months short of his seventy-sixth birthday at the time Apache Prophet is published, J.L. Hefley is still as vigorous and active as most men of fifty. Having moved with his family to Chautauqua county, Kansas in 1871, and thence to Sumner county, Kansas, in 1875, he spent what remained of the first twenty-two years of his life on a farm miles from any town. After receiving his early education in rural schools and after a short period in the Fort Scott, Kansas, normal school, he moved to Norman, Oklahoma Territory, in June 1888, where he did construction work on the Santa Fe Railroad. The author participated in three of the four Oklahoma "runs": the first and most famous in April, 1889; the opening of the Shawnee-Pottawatamie county in September, 1892; and the race into the Cherokee Outlet in September 1893. He entered Oklahoma University at its first enrollment in 1892 and hold one of the first five degrees granted by the University, having received his A.B. in 1899 along with the two other members of O.U.'s second graduating class. Hefley entered the ministry of the Methodist Episcopal Church in 1896 and was a member of the Oklahoma Annual Conference of that church for the next thirty-five years until his retirement in 1931. Nearly all of the poems in this volume were written since that time.

CHURCH TO MISS PIONEER MINISTER
The familiar figure of a retired Methodist minister of old-time pioneering stock will be missing from the congregation at McFarlin Memorial Methodist Church Sunday. The Rev. Jesse L. Hefley died Tuesday at 92. Services will be at 10 a.m. Thursday at McFarlin with burial following in the IOOF Cemetery. Hefley's residence in this area stretches back to the time when Norman was yet to be settled.
HOMESTEAD IN KANSAS
Hefley belonged to a pioneering family of four sons and daughter which homesteaded in Chautauqua County, Kansas in 1871, then moved to Oklahoma in 1888, a year before the opening of the Territory for settlement. The family came to Norman as employees of the Santa Fe Railroad, just completed over the unassigned lands. His parents operated the newly build section house, provided room and board for maintenance employees. Hefley and his three brothers worked on the railroad. In 1889, he made the Run and later took part in the run into Pottawatamie County and the Cherokee Strip. Having had no opportunity to attend school on the frontier, he enrolled at the University of 1892, attending some of the first classes ever held on the dust, then treeless plains.
REQUIREMENTS COMPLETED
After completing his high school requirements, he began work on a degree. He received a bachelor of arts in 1899 he became a member of the second class graduated by the University. He returned to the University to receive an M.S. in education in 1930. In 1896, before finishing at the University, he entered the ministry of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He held a number of pastorates in Oklahoma and New Mexico and also taught for a few years. In 1900 he married Miss Sylvia Watson of Norman, who died in 1947. Although Hefley spend many years of his adult life away from Norman, he returned to live here upon his retirement in the late 1920's. He continued to be active in the Methodist Conference and missed attending the Conference this year for the first time since he entered the ministry. After his retirement, he taught a men's class at McFarlin for many years.
POETRY PUBLISHED
Hefley, aside from the ministry and his family, devoted most of his enthusiasm in the arts and outdoor life. Author of a great many poems, he had two volumes published. "For many years he made it a practice to compose his own poetry for Christmas cards for his friends," his daughter, Mrs. Rachel Hefley said. "Quite a few of the poems were in connection with the early days and the settling of the county. He was interested in hunting, fishing and camping. He was active with his outdoor hobbies until just the last few years. One of his major continuing interests was the University. He remained an active member of the Alumni Association and always attended commencement and reunions, if possible. When he retired, he returned here so that the children could attend the University," Mrs. Keeley said.

Obituary
John Tilman Hefley was born 13 April 1874 in Belmont, Kansas. He died 26 June 1950 in Tulsa, Tulsa, Oklahoma and was buried 29 Jun 1950 in Norman, Cleveland, Oklahoma. John was on Oklahoma University's first football team. He was a football fan all of his life. After graduation, he became Superintendent of Schools in Globe, Arizona, later was principal at Muskogee, Oklahoma, followed by superintendent at Muskogee, Oklahoma to 1923, then superintendent at Stillwater and Enid, Oklahoma. He also worked in the Education Department at Central State University at Edmond, Oklahoma and finally was professor in the Education Department at the University of Oklahoma. He was loved and respected by his many students (Mrs. Maxine Lockhart, 15 Apr. 1993).

The following obituary was prepared by his wife and daughter.
John Tilman Hefley, son of Jefferson L. and Margaret Walcher Hefley, was born April 13, 1874 at Belmont, Kansas. When he was one year old, the family moved to Sumner County, Kansas, where he was reared on a farm. Before the opening of Oklahoma Territory, the family came to what is now Norman in the employ of the Santa Fe Railroad. The father filed a claim in Norman at the time of the original run in 1889. Mr. Hefley enrolled in the "Preparatory Department" of the University of Oklahoma at its first opening in 1892, and, alternating his schooling with school teaching, he was graduated from the University in 1901. He received his Doctor of Education degree from the same institution in 1935, when he returned as a faculty member. The University of Chicago conferred a Master's degree on him in 1925. He spent his life in the schools of Oklahoma, serving on all levels from the one-room school of pre-statehood days, thru principalship and superintendency, to college professorship. He served as High School Principal in Muskogee; as superintendent of schools at Globe, Arizona; Henryetta, Ponca City, Stillwater, Enid, Oklahoma; and on the faculty at Oklahoma A&M College; and for the past fourteen years with the Education Department at the University of Oklahoma. Early in life he united with the Methodist Church, and was a member of the McFarlin Church in Norman at the time of his death. He was a member of the Masonic Order, and of several professional, educational organizations and honorary societies. On November 24, 1903, he was married in Norman to Miss Minnie Rose Gould, who survives him. His children are a daughter, Mrs. R.J. Lockhart of Altus, Oklahoma, and two sons, Dana G. Hefley, Tulsa, and John Theodore Hefley, Minneapolis, Minnesota. There are three grandsons. Two brothers and four sisters survive him. They are: Rev. J.L. Hefley and H.M. Hefley, both of Norman; Mrs. Orana Kahoe, Burbank, California; Mrs. Nora Allan, Oklahoma City; Mrs. Belle Fenn, Marble Falls, Arkansas; and Mrs. Nellie H. Lyle, Burbank, California.

Notes for MINNIE ROSE GOULD:
Minnie's parents were Simon Gilbert "Gil" Gould and Anna Arvilla Robinson.

This information from Charlie Bird and written by Maxine Hefley Gould.
Minnie moved with her family to Kansas in 1887. She grew up on a farm near Winfield, Kansas. Minnie rode horseback for 5 to 6 miles to go to school. She moved to Norman, Oklahoma in 1901 where she and her brother went to the University of Oklahoma. They helped each other financially to cover the cost of tuition. For many years she lived with her husband at 420 Chautauqua Street, Norman, Oklahoma. On August 18, 1960, she lived at Hodges Nursing Home, Box 29, Elk City, Oklahoma. She later moved to a Nursing Home in Altus, Oklahoma, where she was near her daughter, Maxine.

"My great grandfather, Benjamin Gould, took up land from the government soon after 1800. Charley's son, Don, who lived in Denver, Colorado, has in his possession, the document signed by President James Monroe. The location was three miles north of Lower Salem, Washington County, Ohio. Benjamin's land lay on both sides of Duck Creek where the river got its name. Later the farm was divided between his tow sons; Ephraim being deeded the land on one side of Duck Creek and Daniel the land on the other side. Ephraim gave the site fro a church and cemetery, and it was named for him - Mt. Ephraim. When my parents married, my father, Gilbert, was deeded 20 acres fro his father Ephraim's farm. On it father built a house and there I was born. I do not recall my parents ever speaking of 'the old log church'. When the present church was built, the frame church, then in use, was moved across the road, to father's farm, and became a hay barn and stable for his horses. Father use it, up the time we moved to Kansas, in 1887. This was a building, similar, only smaller than the new church, which was dedicated in 1873. I know nothing about a 'log' church, which might very well have been the original one. I remember hearing the older folks talk about how the timber once came down to Duck Creek, but in the course of years the land was cleared for planting fields of corn and grain. Sugar maple trees and a few beech , chestnut and buckeye trees were left standing. I have no doubt that father, as a boy, helped clear the land. When I can first remember, there was timber only on the tops of the hills. We had to go through a stretch of woods to reach Uncle William Robinson's place, which was on a hill. Uncle William was my mother's brother, and old man of seventy, or more, as I remember him. A huge beech tree stood in our front yard, where Charley and I had our swing. There was a grove of Chestnut trees on Chestnut Hill, but a blight, in later years, killed all the Chestnut trees in that county. Sap, from maple trees, was boiled down for syrup and maple sugar, by many farmer's wives in the neighborhood. My mother's parents, Mr. & Mrs. Caleb Robinson, took up land a little later than the Goulds. All the bottom land was gone, so they secured a hill farm, and there Anna Arvilla was born in 1842. My father and mother were born the same year, and died the same year, 1920. The are buried in the IOOF Cemetery, Norman, Oklahoma, as are Charley, Nina, and my husband, John T. Hefley." Written by Minnie Rose Gould Hefley, "A Little Early Family History.")

Children of JOHN HEFLEY and MINNIE GOULD are:

i. MAXINE GLOZONA[6] HEFLEY, b. 28 December 1904, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, Oklahoma; d. 26 September 1995, Santa Fe, New Mexico; m. ROBERT JUBAL "BOB" LOCKHART, 18 March 1928, Ponca City, Kay, Oklahoma; b. 17 July 1904, Blair, Jackson, Oklahoma; d. 29 February 1988, Altus, Jackson, Oklahoma.

Notes for MAXINE GLOZONA HEFLEY:
Information from Charley Bird
The information below was written by Maxine.
Maxine got her bachelor's and master's degrees in Education from the University of Oklahoma. She taught in Enid, Oklahoma, for two years, then married. She did not go back into teaching until her youngest was in the third grade. She then taught at Healdton, Oklahoma. She later taught in senior high school and eventually Chemistry in the Junior College at Altus. The higher the grades she taught, the more she liked it. Maxine lived with her husband, Bo for many years in Altus, Oklahoma. She moved to Santa Fe, New Mexico, after the February 1988 death of her husband. There she was close to her son, Ed and his wife, Terry, whose company she enjoyed. She often accompanied Ed and Terry to their cabin north of Santa Fe where she enjoyed fishing for trout in the nearby stream. Maxine was well informed on the history of the Southwest United States and had volunteer job as a docent at the Palace Museum in Santa Fe. She was also a "pink lady" in a local hospital where she was a support person in the surgical waiting room. She had fun collecting figurines of cows.

"I have some sad new to pass on - Mother died on September 26, 1995, from complications of a stroke. She had gone 'down hill' rapidly during the last few months, so it was time. She was cremated and her ashes returned to Blair, Oklahoma, and buried beside my father, as she wished. (Written by Ed Lockhart, 17 November 1995.)

Ed went through her collection of photos and sent a group to Charles Bird, "The contents of this package came from her "collection." I have separated out the things which I thought you would want. I am also sending things to Allen Gould, so you might communicate to see if each has something the other might want."

Notes for ROBERT JUBAL "BOB" LOCKHART:
Bob owned a jewelry shop and later became a teacher. He and Maxine lived for many years at 726 East Elm Street, Altus, Oklahoma. Both he and Maxine enjoyed fishing and traveling. Box was first a family of three children, having a sister, Dorothy, and a brother, Eugene. His Lockhart ancestors came from Scotland.

Notes for NELLIE CLEMENTINE HEFLEY:
In 1974, she was living in Four Seasons Nursing Home, Norman, Oklahoma. I visited her and received some information. Made a tape of the conversation, but music in background drowned out the conversation. Notes made: Nelle was 20 years old when she married at either Kingfisher, Oklahoma or Norman? in 1902, Robert Alan Lyle, a widower and an attorney, had one daughter, Edith Lyle was 5 years old. Nelle was living with Edith in the same room at the nursing home. Her father served in the Civil War, they were in Rolla, Missouri. Death on SSDI died in Norman in August 1982, her SS# issued in California.

Obituary appeared in the Norman Transcript, August 1982
PIONEER NORMAN RESIDENT DIES
Nellie Hefley Lyle, the last local eyewitness to the Run of '89, died Wednesday in Norman Municipal Hospital at the age of 100. Services will be at 10 a.m. Saturday in St. Stephen's United Methodist Church. The Rev. Phil Fenn of McFarlin Memorial United Methodist Church will officiate, assisted by the Rev. John Price. Burial will be in IOOF Cemetery under the direction of Wilson Funeral Service. Born November 23, 1881, in Kansas, Mrs.

Lyle came to Norman with her family when she was 8 years old. Jefferson and Margaret Hefley and their eight children became the second permanently located family in Norman, which was at that time a junction of two sections of railroad maintenance. Mrs. Lyle's memories of April 22, 1889, the day of the Run, were still "as vivid as they could be" on her 100th birthday last November. She recalled sitting atop a wooden fence surrounding the railroad section house to watch as "the country filled with people coming from every direction by train, horses, wagons and on foot. It was a great site," she said. Her family opened a restaurant for the crowds and later built one of the first hotels in Norman. She attended Norman schools, the University of Oklahoma and the Methodist Episcopal Church on Asp Street. She left Norman briefly when her family moved to Comanche County, but returned in 1902 to marry Robert A. Lyle. He later practiced law in Kingfisher, Oklahoma City and Texas. She returned to Norman in 1925 as a widow with two young children, worked in relief organizations during the Depression and later was food supervisor of OU's Hester Robinson Hall when it was a dormitory. Mrs. Lyle moved to Los Angeles in 1938, but came back to Norman to stay in 1950. She attended McFarlin Memorial and was active in establishing St. Stephen's. The St. Stephens' Fellowship Hall is dedicated to her. She was a member of numerous clubs including a Home Demonstration Club, the Wisteria Garden Club and the Cleveland County Historical Society. Survivors include her daughter, Edith Flood of Norman; five grandchildren, including James Flood of Norman; 10 great grandchildren; and 11 great-great grandchildren.

NELLIE LYLE

Services for long-time Norman resident, Nellie Lyle, 100, will be at 10 a.m. Saturday in St. Stephen's United Methodist Church. The Rev. 1. JESSE LEHMANOWSKY[4] HEFLEY (JEFFERSON L. "LEM"[3], TILMAN (TILMON)[2], ADAM[1]) was born 10 January 1866, and died 17 June 1958 in Norman, Cleveland, Oklahoma. He married SYLVIA LORETTA WATSON 12 June 1900 in Norman, Cleveland, Oklahoma. She was born 27 April 1879 in Lewis County, Washington, and died 28 June 1947 in Norman, Cleveland, Oklahoma.

Notes for JESSE LEHMANOWSKY HEFLEY:
Entered University of Oklahoma in first enrollment 1892 and graduated with the second class, receiving a AB degree in 1899, graduated with the first 5 people to graduated from OU.
Minister in the Methodist Episcopal Church in 1896, retired in 1931.
Helped to establish the Methodist Church in Norman, his funeral was held in this church.
Wrote and published a book of poems "Apache Prophet and Shorter Poems, in 1941 by Oklahoma City University Press, Oklahoma City, OK found in the Oklahoma Historical Society Building, OKC. The preface to the book reads: ABOUT THE AUTHOR--Born in Montgomery county, Illinois, January 10, 1866, and but three months short of his seventy-sixth birthday at the time Apache Prophet is published, J.L. Hefley is still as vigorous and active as most men of fifty. Having moved with his family to Chautauqua county, Kansas in 1871, and thence to Sumner county, Kansas, in 1875, he spent what remained of the first twenty-two years of his life on a farm miles from any town. After receiving his early education in rural schools and after a short period in the Fort Scott, Kansas, normal school, he moved to Norman, Oklahoma Territory, in June 1888, where he did construction work on the Santa Fe Railroad. The author participated in three of the four Oklahoma "runs": the first and most famous in April, 1889; the opening of the Shawnee-Pottawatamie county in September, 1892; and the race into the Cherokee Outlet in September 1893. He entered Oklahoma University at its first enrollment in 1892 and hold one of the first five degrees granted by the University, having received his A.B. in 1899 along with the two other members of O.U.'s second graduating class. Hefley entered the ministry of the Methodist Episcopal Church in 1896 and was a member of the Oklahoma Annual Conference of that church for the next thirty-five years until his retirement in 1931. Nearly all of the poems in this volume were written since that time.

CHURCH TO MISS PIONEER MINISTER
The familiar figure of a retired Methodist minister of old-time pioneering stock will be missing from the congregation at McFarlin Memorial Methodist Church Sunday. The Rev. Jesse L. Hefley died Tuesday at 92. Services will be at 10 a.m. Thursday at McFarlin with burial following in the IOOF Cemetery. Hefley's residence in this area stretches back to the time when Norman was yet to be settled.
HOMESTEAD IN KANSAS
Hefley belonged to a pioneering family of four sons and daughter which homesteaded in Chautauqua County, Kansas in 1871, then moved to Oklahoma in 1888, a year before the opening of the Territory for settlement. The family came to Norman as employees of the Santa Fe Railroad, just completed over the unassigned lands. His parents operated the newly build section house, provided room and board for maintenance employees. Hefley and his three brothers worked on the railroad. In 1889, he made the Run and later took part in the run into Pottawatamie County and the Cherokee Strip. Having had no opportunity to attend school on the frontier, he enrolled at the University of 1892, attending some of the first classes ever held on the dust, then treeless plains.
REQUIREMENTS COMPLETED
After completing his high school requirements, he began work on a degree. He received a bachelor of arts in 1899 he became a member of the second class graduated by the University. He returned to the University to receive an M.S. in education in 1930. In 1896, before finishing at the University, he entered the ministry of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He held a number of pastorates in Oklahoma and New Mexico and also taught for a few years. In 1900 he married Miss Sylvia Watson of Norman, who died in 1947. Although Hefley spend many years of his adult life away from Norman, he returned to live here upon his retirement in the late 1920's. He continued to be active in the Methodist Conference and missed attending the Conference this year for the first time since he entered the ministry. After his retirement, he taught a men's class at McFarlin for many

POETRY PUBLISHED

Hefley, aside from the ministry and his family, devoted most of his enthusiasm in the arts and outdoor life. Author of a great many poems, he had two volumes published. "For many years he made it a practice to compose his own poetry for Christmas cards for his friends," his daughter, Mrs. Rachel Hefley said. "Quite a few of the poems were in connection with the early days and the settling of the county. He was interested in hunting, fishing and camping. He was active with his outdoor hobbies until just the last few years. One of his major continuing interests was the University. He remained an active member of the Alumni Association and always attended commencement and reunions, if possible. When he retired, he returned here so that the children could attend the University," Mrs. Keeley said.

Descendants of John Tillman Hefley

Generation No. 1

1. JOHN TILLMAN[4] HEFLEY (JEFFERSON L. "LEM"[3], TILMAN (TILMON)[2], ADAM[1]) was born 13 April 1874 in Belmont, Howard, Kansas, and died 26 June 1950 in Tulsa, Tulsa, Oklahoma. He married MINNIE ROSE GOULD[1] 24 November 1903 in Norman, Cleveland, Oklahoma, daughter of SIMON GOULD and ANNA ROBINSON. She was born 20 February 1875 in Duck Creek, Lower Salem, Washington County, Ohio, and died 01 March 1968 in Altus, Jackson, Oklahoma.

Notes for JOHN TILLMAN HEFLEY:
All of this information from Charlie Bird, grandson of Dr. Charles Gould.

Obituary
John Tilman Hefley was born 13 April 1874 in Belmont, Kansas. He died 26 June 1950 in Tulsa, Tulsa, Oklahoma and was buried 29 Jun 1950 in Norman, Cleveland, Oklahoma. John was on Oklahoma University's first football team. He was a football fan all of his life. After graduation, he became Superintendent of Schools in Globe, Arizona, later was principal at Muskogee, Oklahoma, followed by superintendent at Muskogee, Oklahoma to 1923, then superintendent at Stillwater and Enid, Oklahoma. He also worked in the Education Department at Central State University at Edmond, Oklahoma and finally was professor in the Education Department at the University of Oklahoma. He was loved and respected by his many students (Mrs. Maxine Lockhart, 15 Apr. 1993).

The following obituary was prepared by his wife and daughter.
John Tilman Hefley, son of Jefferson L. and Margaret Walcher Hefley, was born April 13, 1874 at Belmont, Kansas. When he was one year old, the family moved to Sumner County, Kansas, where he was reared on a farm. Before the opening of Oklahoma Territory, the family came to what is now Norman in the employ of the Santa Fe Railroad. The father filed a claim in Norman at the time of the original run in 1889. Mr. Hefley enrolled in the "Preparatory Department" of the University of Oklahoma at its first opening in 1892, and, alternating his schooling with school teaching, he was graduated from the University in 1901. He received his Doctor of Education degree from the same institution in 1935, when he returned as a faculty member. The University of Chicago conferred a Master's degree on him in 1925. He spent his life in the schools of Oklahoma, serving on all levels from the one-room school of pre-statehood days, thru principalship and superintendency, to college professorship. He served as High School Principal in Muskogee; as superintendent of schools at Globe, Arizona; Henryetta, Ponca City, Stillwater, Enid, Oklahoma; and on the faculty at Oklahoma A&M College; and for the past fourteen years with the Education Department at the University of Oklahoma. Early in life he united with the Methodist Church, and was a member of the McFarlin Church in Norman at the time of his death. He was a member of the Masonic Order, and of several professional, educational organizations and honorary societies. On November 24, 1903, he was married in Norman to Miss Minnie Rose Gould, who survives him. His children are a daughter, Mrs. R.J. Lockhart of Altus, Oklahoma, and two sons, Dana G. Hefley, Tulsa, and John Theodore Hefley, Minneapolis, Minnesota. There are three grandsons. Two brothers and four sisters survive him. They are: Rev. J.L. Hefley and H.M. Hefley, both of Norman; Mrs. Orana Kahoe, Burbank, California; Mrs. Nora Allan, Oklahoma City; Mrs. Belle Fenn, Marble Falls, Arkansas; and Mrs. Nellie H. Lyle, Burbank, California.

Notes for MINNIE ROSE GOULD:
Minnie's parents were Simon Gilbert "Gil" Gould and Anna Arvilla Robinson.

This information from Charlie Bird and written by Maxine Hefley Gould.
Minnie moved with her family to Kansas in 1887. She grew up on a farm near Winfield, Kansas. Minnie rode horseback for 5 to 6 miles to go to school. She moved to Norman, Oklahoma in 1901 where she and her brother went to the University of Oklahoma. They helped each other financially to cover the cost of tuition. For many years she lived with her husband at 420 Chautauqua Street, Norman, Oklahoma. On August 18, 1960, she lived at Hodges Nursing Home, Box 29, Elk City, Oklahoma. She later moved to a Nursing Home in Altus, Oklahoma, where she was near her daughter, Maxine.

"My great grandfather, Benjamin Gould, took up land from the government soon after 1800. Charley's son, Don, who lived in Denver, Colorado, has in his possession, the document signed by President James Monroe. The location was three miles north of Lower Salem, Washington County, Ohio. Benjamin's land lay on both sides of Duck Creek where the river got its name. Later the farm was divided between his tow sons; Ephraim being deeded the land on one side of Duck Creek and Daniel the land on the other side. Ephraim gave the site fro a church and cemetery, and it was named for him - Mt. Ephraim. When my parents married, my father, Gilbert, was deeded 20 acres fro his father Ephraim's farm. On it father built a house and there I was born. I do not recall my parents ever speaking of 'the old log church'. When the present church was built, the frame church, then in use, was moved across the road, to father's farm, and became a hay barn and stable for his horses. Father use it, up the time we moved to Kansas, in 1887. This was a building, similar, only smaller than the new church, which was dedicated in 1873. I know nothing about a 'log' church, which might very well have been the original one. I remember hearing the older folks talk about how the timber once came down to Duck Creek, but in the course of years the land was cleared for planting fields of corn and grain. Sugar maple trees and a few beech , chestnut and buckeye trees were left standing. I have no doubt that father, as a boy, helped clear the land. When I can first remember, there was timber only on the tops of the hills. We had to go through a stretch of woods to reach Uncle William Robinson's place, which was on a hill. Uncle William was my mother's brother, and old man of seventy, or more, as I remember him. A huge beech tree stood in our front yard, where Charley and I had our swing. There was a grove of Chestnut trees on Chestnut Hill, but a blight, in later years, killed all the Chestnut trees in that county. Sap, from maple trees, was boiled down for syrup and maple sugar, by many farmer's wives in the neighborhood. My mother's parents, Mr. & Mrs. Caleb Robinson, took up land a little later than the Goulds. All the bottom land was gone, so they secured a hill farm, and there Anna Arvilla was born in 1842. My father and mother were born the same year, and died the same year, 1920. The are buried in the IOOF Cemetery, Norman, Oklahoma, as are Charley, Nina, and my husband, John T. Hefley." Written by Minnie Rose Gould Hefley, "A Little Early Family History.")

Children of JOHN HEFLEY and MINNIE GOULD are:

2. i. MAXINE GLOZONA[5] HEFLEY, b. 28 December 1904, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, Oklahoma; d. 26 September 1995, Santa Fe, New Mexico.
3. ii. DANA GOULD HEFLEY, b. 25 January 1906, Muskogee, Muskogee, Oklahoma; d. 20 December 2001, Tulsa, Tulsa, Oklahoma.
4. iii. JOHN THEODORE "TED" HEFLEY, b. 26 January 1918, Henryetta, Oklahoma.

Generation No. 2

2. MAXINE GLOZONA[5] HEFLEY (JOHN TILLMAN[4], JEFFERSON L. "LEM"[3], TILMAN (TILMON)[2], ADAM[1]) was born 28 December 1904 in Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, Oklahoma, and died 26 September 1995 in Santa Fe, New Mexico. She married ROBERT JUBAL "BOB" LOCKHART 18 March 1928 in Ponca City, Kay, Oklahoma, son of WILLIAM LOCKHART and MYRTICE VANNERSON. He was born 17 July 1904 in Blair, Jackson, Oklahoma, and died 29 February 1988 in Altus, Jackson, Oklahoma.

Notes for MAXINE GLOZONA HEFLEY:
Information from Charley Bird
The information below was written by Maxine.
Maxine got her bachelor's and master's degrees in Education from the University of Oklahoma. She taught in Enid, Oklahoma, for two years, then married. She did not go back into teaching until her youngest was in the third grade. She then taught at Healdton, Oklahoma. She later taught in senior high school and eventually Chemistry in the Junior College at Altus. The higher the grades she taught, the more she liked it. Maxine lived with her husband, Bo for many years in Altus, Oklahoma. She moved to Santa Fe, New Mexico, after the February 1988 death of her husband. There she was close to her son, Ed and his wife, Terry, whose company she enjoyed. She often accompanied Ed and Terry to their cabin north of Santa Fe where she enjoyed fishing for trout in the nearby stream. Maxine was well informed on the history of the Southwest United States and had volunteer job as a docent at the Palace Museum in Santa Fe. She was also a "pink lady" in a local hospital where she was a support person in the surgical waiting room. She had fun collecting figurines of cows.

"I have some sad new to pass on - Mother died on September 26, 1995, from complications of a stroke. She had gone 'down hill' rapidly during the last few months, so it was time. She was cremated and her ashes returned to Blair, Oklahoma, and buried beside my father, as she wished. (Written by Ed Lockhart, 17 November 1995.)

The location was three miles north of Lower Salem, Washington County, Ohio. Benjamin's land lay on both sides of Duck Creek where the river got its name. Later the farm was divided between his two sons, Ephraim (who deeded the land on one side of Duck Creek and Daniel the land on the other side. Ephraim gave the site for a church and cemetery, and it was named for him - Mt. Ephraim. Where my parents married, my father, Clifford, was deeded 20 acres by his father Ephraim's farm. On it father built a house and there I was born. I do not recall my parents ever speaking of 'the old log church'. When the present church was built, the frame church, then in use, was moved across the road, to father's farm, and became a barn and stable for his horses. Father used it up the time we moved to Kansas, in 1857. This was a building, similar, only smaller than the new church, which was dedicated in 1873. I know nothing about a 'log' church, which might very well have been the original one. I remember hearing the older folks talk about how the timber once came down to Duck Creek, but in the course of years the land was cleared for planting fields of corn and grain. Sugar maple trees and a few beech, chestnut and hickory trees were left standing. I have no doubt that father, as a boy, helped clear the land. When I can first remember, there was timber only on the tops of the hills. We had to go through a stretch of woods to reach Uncle William Robinson's place, which was on a hill. Uncle William was my mother's brother, and old man of seventy, or more, as I remember him. A huge beech tree stood in our front yard, where Charley and I had our swing. There was a grove of Chestnut trees on Chestnut Hill, but a village later years, filled all the Chestnut trees in that county. Sap, from maple trees, was boiled down for syrup and maple sugar, by many farmer's wives in the neighborhood. My mother's parents, Mr. & Mrs. Caleb Robinson, took up land a little later than the Goulds. All the bottom land was gone, so they secured a hill farm, and there Anna Arvilla was born in 1842. My father and mother were born the same year, and died the same year, 1920. The are buried in the IOOF Cemetery, Bloomun, Oklahoma, as are Charley, Nina, and my husband, John T. Hedley." Written by Minnie Rose Gould Hedley, "A Little Early Family History.")

Ed went through her collection of photos and sent a group to Charles Bird, "The contents of this package came from her "collection." I have separated out the things which I thought you would want. I am also sending things to Allen Gould, so you might communicate to see if each has something the other might want."

Generation No. 1

1. NELLIE CLEMENTINE[4] HEFLEY (JEFFERSON L. "LEM"[3], TILMAN (TILMON)[2], ADAM[1]) was born 23 November 1881 in South Haven, Sumner, Kansas, and died 18 August 1982 in Norman, Cleveland, Oklahoma. She married ROBERT ALBERT LYLE 15 January 1902 in Norman, Cleveland, Oklahoma. He died 25 October 1925 in California.

Notes for NELLIE CLEMENTINE HEFLEY:
In 1974, she was living in Four Seasons Nursing Home, Norman, Oklahoma. I visited her and received some information. Made a tape of the conversation, but music in background drowned out the conversation. Notes made: Nelle was 20 years old when she married at either Kingfisher, Oklahoma or Norman? in 1902, Robert Alan Lyle, a widower and an attorney, had one daughter, Edith Lyle was 5 years old. Nelle was living with Edith in the same room at the nursing home. Her father served in the Civil War, they were in Rolla, Missouri. Death on SSDI died in Norman in August 1982, her SS# issued in California.

Obituary appeared in the Norman Transcript, August 1982
PIONEER NORMAN RESIDENT DIES
Nellie Hefley Lyle, the last local eyewitness to the Run of '89, died Wednesday in Norman Municipal Hospital at the age of 100. Services will be at 10 a.m. Saturday in St. Stephen's United Methodist Church. The Rev. Phil Fenn of McFarlin Memorial United Methodist Church will officiate, assisted by the Rev. John Price. Burial will be in IOOF Cemetery under the direction of Wilson Funeral Service. Born November 23, 1881, in Kansas, Mrs. Lyle came to Norman with her family when she was 8 years old. Jefferson and Margaret Hefley and their eight children became the second permanently located family in Norman, which was at that time a junction of two sections of railroad maintenance. Mrs. Lyle's memories of April 22, 1889, the day of the Run, were still "as vivid as they could be" on her 100th birthday last November. She recalled sitting atop a wooden fence surrounding the railroad section house to watch as "the country filled with people coming from every direction by train, horses, wagons and on foot. It was a great site," she said. Her family opened a restaurant for the crowds and later built one of the first hotels in Norman. She attended Norman schools, the University of Oklahoma and the Methodist Episcopal Church on Asp Street. She left Norman briefly when her family moved to Comanche County, but returned in 1902 to marry Robert A. Lyle. He later practiced law in Kingfisher, Oklahoma City and Texas. She returned to Norman in 1925 as a widow with two young children, worked in relief organizations during the Depression and later was food supervisor of OU's Hester Robinson Hall when it was a dormitory. Mrs. Lyle moved to Los Angeles in 1938, but came back to Norman to stay in 1950. She attended McFarlin Memorial and was active in establishing St. Stephen's. The St. Stephens' Fellowship Hall is dedicated to her. She was a member of numerous clubs including a Home Demonstration Club, the Wisteria Garden Club and the Cleveland County Historical Society. Survivors include her daughter, Edith Flood of Norman; five grandchildren, including James Flood of Norman; 10 great grandchildren; and 11 great-great grandchildren.

NELLIE LYLE
Services for long-time Norman resident, Nellie Lyle, 100, will be at 10 a.m. Saturday in St. Stephen's United Methodist Church. The Rev. Phil Fenn of McFarlin Memorial United Methodist Church will officiate, assisted by the Rev. John Price. Burial will be in IOOF Cemetery under the direction of Wilson Funeral Service. Pallbearers will be James R. Flood, Daniel J. Eubanks, O. Boyd Hefley, J. Lehman Hefley, Maurice Hefley and William Carter.

I was going thru some internet files from Ancestry.com where I found this file. I believe Maxine had a lot of this material but when they cleared out her house in Altus it was lost or destroyed. We never found it. She told me she had a family history done and I'm sure she did. She was always keeping her notes and working on projects. Her pictures and books went to Eds house because Maxine was in N. Mexico after her husband died.
I'm not sure who charlie Bird is and Jack is not familiar with the name. I will check with Ed to see what he can remember. He handeled his mothers estate and was more familiar with some of it than Jack was. Jack is retired. He has 3 sons, John Jr., Jim and Jeff. All his children are by his first wife Patricia. She died in 1974. He and I were married in 1988. I had 2 sons by my first husband. So we have 5 sons all together. No girls.
I am hoping to get this done for the children and we have one granddaughter, that I would like to get involved in DAR and ect. I also have Pats family history for her.
Thank you for your help & answer and I will be in touch I'm sure.

Now into my 26th year in search of ancestral family & the 16th year for many of their descendants. As I routinely receive anywhere from fifteen to twenty-five or more e-mail queries per day, am often unable to respond to many in anything approaching a timely fashion in spite of my best intentions. Even though I do try my best to accurately document family, always verify, verify, VERIFY!

Edna, please refresh my memory, where did you read the information on Minnie Rose Gould Hefley? I do not have any information in my file that I have corresponded with you previously. I may have other information that you might like to have and will be happy to share it with you.

The information I have on Minnie came from Charlie Bird who was on a Canada Airforce base in 1997-98. I have tried several times to contact him, but I am sure he was transferred or retired and the email address is no longer good. Perhaps you know him? In his information he listed Jack and his three boys and marriages to Patricia and you, so I feel he is closely related to you.
Please let me know if I can help you in your research.
Most Sincerely,
Barbara Walcher Fulton

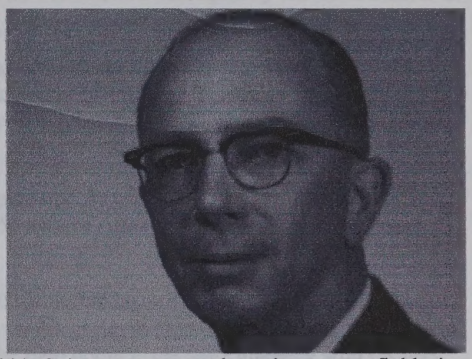
Memorial to Donald Boyd Gould

1906-1989

William A. Fischer

Department of Geology (Professor Emeritus),

Colorado College, Colorado Springs, Colorado 80903



Dr. Donald Boyd Gould, a Fellow if the Geological Society of America, was born in Norman, Oklahoma, on December 6, 1906, and died on February 25, 1989, in Denver, Colorado. He was best known as an educator and for his expertise in the structural geology and paleozoic stratigraphy of Colorado and Utah, the regional geology of the Canadian Arctic archipelago, the tectonics of piercement domes of Queen Elizabeth Islands, and as an air-photo analyst.

Don was raised in an academic environment and introduced to the science of geology at a very early age. His father, Charles Newton Gould, was the first Oklahoma state geologist and founder of the geology department at the University of Oklahoma at Norman. As a young boy, Don often accompanied his father on many geology department field trips to the Arbuckle Mountains of Oklahoma.

A family trip in 1918 took the Goulds to South Park, Colorado, where Don's parents decided to build a cabin near the Weston Pass road and to call it Beaver Lodge. Later in his life Don selected South Park as the subject of his doctoral dissertation, and Beaver Lodge became a focal point for many of his geology classes from Cornell College and Colorado College.

Educated in the public schools of Norman and Oklahoma City, Don received the Bachelor of Science degree from the University of Oklahoma in 1928. While an undergraduate, he worked the summer of 1926 for the Borealis Oil Company, mapping the country around Cisco, Texas; he spent the summer of 1927 in Leadville, Colorado, as a rodman on a topographic mapping crew; and in 1928 he attended summer school at the University of Iowa, taking courses in museum methods. After washing dishes in a restaurant that summer, he earned enough money to purchase his first car, a Model T Ford. The summer of 1929 found him mapping the Model Dome east of Trinidad, Colorado. This structure produced helium gas from an exploratory well drilled by the Helium Company of Kentucky. For this experience Don earned enough money to purchase a brand new Model A Ford roadster, which provided transportation for three subsequent seasons of field work near Trout Creek Pass, Colorado, enabling him to complete his Ph.D. dissertation at the University of Iowa in 1936.

In 1930 Don Gould and Frances Leitner were married, and they lived in Mt. Vernon, Iowa, from 1931 to 1937 while he taught geology at Cornell College. The marriage produced two sons, Allen, who lives in Aurora, Colorado, and Warren, of Los Angeles, California. Frances died in 1980.

From 1937 to 1955 Don served as chairman and professor of geology at Colorado College in Colorado Springs, Colorado. It was during this period that I first met him, when he hired me as an instructor in the department to help cope with the post-World War II burgeoning enrollments. Watching a gifted teacher and talented artist, I was often in awe as I watched him cover an entire blackboard with three-dimensional block diagrams showing the evolution of the Colorado Front Range of the Rocky Mountains. Dr. Donald Boyd Gould, a Fellow of the Geological Society of America, was born in Newman, Oklahoma, on December 6, 1906, and died on February 25, 1989, in Denver, Colorado. He was best known as an educator and for his expertise in the structural geology and paleozoic stratigraphy of Colorado and Utah, the regional geology of the Canadian Arctic archipelago, the tectonics of precipitant domes of Queen Elizabeth Islands, and as an ad-photo analyst.

Don was raised in an academic environment and introduced to the science of geology at a very early age. His father, Charles Newton Gould, was the first Oklahoma state geologist and founder of the geology department at the University of Oklahoma at Norman. As a young boy, Don often accompanied his father on many geology department field trips to the Arbuckle Mountains of Oklahoma.

Later in his life Don selected South Park as the subject of his doctoral dissertation, and Beaver Lodge became a focal point for many of his geology classes from Cornell College and Colorado College.

Educated in the public schools of Norman and Oklahoma City, Don received the Bachelor of Science degree from the University of Oklahoma in 1928. While an undergraduate, he worked the summer of 1926 for the Barnsdall Oil Company, mapping the county around Cisco, Texas. He spent the summer of 1927 in Leadville, Colorado, as a rodman on a topographic mapping crew, and in 1928 he attended summer school at the University of Iowa, taking courses in museum methods. After washing dishes for a restaurant the summer, he earned enough money to purchase his first car, a Model T Ford. The summer of 1929 found him mapping the Model Dome east of Trinidad, Colorado. This structure produced helium gas from an asphaltoxy well drilled by the Helium Company of Kentucky. For this experience Don earned enough money to purchase a brand new Model A Ford roadster, which provided transportation for three subsequent seasons of field work near Three Creek Pass, Colorado, enabling him to complete his Ph.D. dissertation at the University of Iowa in 1936.

In 1930 Don Gould and Frances Luther were married, and they lived in Mt. Vernon, Iowa, from 1931 to 1937 while he taught geology at Cornell College. The marriage produced two sons, Allen, who lives in Aurora, Colorado, and Warren, of Los Angeles, California. Frances died in 1980.

From 1937 to 1955 Don served as chairman and professor of geology at Colorado College in Colorado Springs, Colorado. It was during this period that I first met him, when he hired me as an instructor in the department to help cope with the post-World War II burgeoning enrollments. Watching a gifted teacher and talented artist, I was often in awe as I watched him cover an entire blackboard with three-dimensional block diagrams showing the evolution of the Colorado Front Range of the Rocky Mountains. These were the years of less departmental budgets and heavy teaching loads. When equipment couldn't be purchased, Don would design and build items such as air-photo stereo viewers, miniature and full-size stadia rods, and even a table-sized relief model of the Pikes Peak region with aerial and subsurface geology all portrayed. Of the many courses he taught, structural geology, field methods, geologic map interpretation, and geomorphology were his favorites. Be he also loved stratigraphy, and because of his deep interest in the Pennsylvanian systems of rocks, we often made bets in the department to see when, and if, he would get past the Carboniferous when teaching historical geology. There were times when the Mesozoic and Cenozoic eras were covered in record time! His interest in the Carboniferous was even displayed in Beaver Lodge cabin, where Don has constructed a stratigraphic fireplace using Precambrian rocks for the base and Pennsylvanian at the top, with a hearth of Permian sandstone. Generations of Colorado College geology seniors looked forward with great anticipation to their traditional spring field trip to South Park and a stay at Beaver Lodge. (See: Memoirs of the Cabin, by Dr. Donald B. Gould)

Don left Colorado College in 1955 to work as a research geologist and air-photo analyst for Geophoto Services in Denver, Colorado. He was later transferred to Calgary, Alberta, Canada, and subsequently retired in Denver in 1968.

He was a member of Phi Beta Kappa, Sigma Xi, Sigma Gamma Epsilon, the Oklahoma, Iowa, and Colorado-Wyoming Academies of Science, the American Association of Petroleum Geologists, the Rocky Mountain Association of Geologists, and the American Institute of Professional Geologists, and a Fellow the the Geological Society of America.

Don had numerous articles published in various state geology guide books and the "American Association of Petroleum Geologists Bulletin", and he coauthored Geological Society of America Memoir 33, "Geology and Origin of South Park, Colorado".

Following his retirement, he engaged in a long and painful battle with Parkinson's disease, but managed always to keep busy. He was an active member of the Geolly Boys discussion group in Denver until shortly before his death and for several years prior would spend every Friday in the field doing plane table mapping with his very dear friend, Harry W. Oborne.

One of his fondest recollections was his return to Norman, Oklahoma, in 1951 to participate in the dedication ceremony of the Charles N. Gould Hall of Geology at the University of Oklahoma and subsequently to see the publication of his father's autobiography, "The Covered Wagon Geologist".

Former students, colleagues, and friends have expressed their love, admiration, and friendship for this truly dedicated teacher by establishing the Donald B. Gould Scholarship in Geology at Colorado College.

Jerry Sinise Collection, 1809 - 1991

The Jerry Sinise Collection contains research materials on several important western historical figures including Captain G. W. Arrington of the Texas Rangers and the infamous Horrell-Higgins feud, of which Sinise focused on John "Pink" Higgins. The Sinise collection contains a number of photographs including copies of photos from various library archives. His photo collection includes photographs of several well known western historical figures such as Wm. Tilghman, Captain G. W. Arrington, Pancho Villa, John "Pink" Higgins and Geronimo. His photo collection also includes a limited edition series of photographs that depict the construction of the Pioneer Woman statue in Ponca City, Oklahoma.

Sinise also wrote seven books, they include: Pink Higgins, The Reluctant Gunfighter and Other Tales of the Panhandle (Nortex Press, 1973), (Texas Cattle Feeders Association, 1977), George Washington Arrington, Civil War Spy, TexasRanger, Sheriff and Rancher (Eakin Press, 1978), Black Gold and Red Lights, the story of the first four years of Borger, Texas (Eakin Publications, 1982), Texas Show Caves, the history of 7 commercially-operated caverns in Texas (collaborated with his wife Dorothy), (Eakin Press,1983), Johnson Remembered, a biography of Lyndon Baines Johnson, in collaboration with Jakie Pruett (Eakin Publications, 1985), The Dr. O. M. Franklin Story, a biography of the man who patented the first workable blackleg vaccine for cattle (privately published by the Franklin family). Sinise was a ghostwriter for several publications, they include: The Hon. James Nathan Browning (1850-1921); for the Potter County Historical Survey Committee in 1969, and Three Questions-Three Answers*, a story from the life of Dr. Charles Newton Gould (1868-1949);for the Potter County Historical Survey Committee, in 1967.

11. WORLD'S FIRST SCHOOL OF PETROLEUM GEOLOGY

Charles Newton Gould, known as the "Father of Oklahoma Geology", established in 1900 at the University of Oklahoma what is now the School of Geology and Geophysics. It became the first school of petroleum geology in the World.

Gould's covered-wagon geological field work added significantly to the energy and water-related geology of Oklahoma and the Southwest.

As a result of his pioneering faith in the scientific approach to oil and gas exploration, he, his professor associates and students established as a science the use of both surface and subsurface geology in the each for oil and gas. It was not until the early 1920's that geology, and later geophysics, gained acceptance and wider use as oil-finding techniques.

As our nation entered its Bicentennial year, the school's geology and geophysics graduates outnumbered those of any other university in the world. Its graduates are among the world's foremost petroleum geologists and geophysicists - having discovered significant oil and gas reserves throughout the world.

Today, these graduates and those of other universities make up the membership of the American Association of Petroleum Geologists, an association of scientists founded by Gould and others on the University of Oklahoma campus.

12. OKLAHOMA'S OIL PIONEERS

Oklahoma's rise to prominence as a leading producer of oil, natural gas and refined products can be attributed in great measure to the determination and hardy spirit of its pioneers in the industry. These were wildcatters, the roughnecks, drillers, pipeliners, the operators of primitive processing plants, and those who provided the risk capital.

As the industry evolved, these oil pioneers were joined by innovators, geologists, engineers, scientists and management people.

Through successes and frequent failures, there developed the sciences, the techniques, processes and conservation approaches that earned for Oklahoma the title "the State that oil built". These developments showed the way to economic benefits for all of Oklahoma and influenced technological progress in our nation and the world.

As a result of these pioneering efforts, Oklahoma was ranked as fourth largest crude oil producing state and was third in natural gas production in 1976, the Bicentennial year of our Nation.

School of Geology and Geophysics

University of Oklahoma

The School of Geology and Geophysics at the University of Oklahoma was founded by Charles Newton Gould (1868-1949), a man who started with nothing more than a love for geology. It was his dedication, perseverance, and vision that created both the School of Geology and Geophysics and the Oklahoma Geological Survey.

Charles N. Gould was born in a log cabin in Ohio on July 22, 1868. Gould described his family as poor, having scarcely the necessities of life. For weeks, they often had nothing more to eat than corn bread and fat meat without the luxuries of wheat bread or sugar. Gould's mother never permitted her children to know they were poor. At the start of each day before breakfast the family would gather and Gould's father would read a chapter from the Bible and lead the family in prayer. Gould stated simply, "religious observance was a vital thing and part of our daily lives". As a child he signed a temperance pledge which he took quite seriously. Sixty years later, he testified: "I do not know the taste of spiritous liquor, nor have I ever used tobacco in any form". Gould also attributed a good part of success in life to the moral training imparted by his mother:

> "No small part of any success I may have achieved is due to the habit I learned early in life, of being on time and persistently sticking to a task until it was completed."

A sickly child, Gould had a passion for reading. He took every opportunity within his reach to gain an education and worked in the meantime to earn money to buy clothes and books. Although the boy Charles Gould disliked farm work and detested doing chores, he loved nature and enjoyed fishing and hunting. Gould's earliest geological activities were collecting rocks and helping to dig coal on the family farm.

When he was eighteen, Gould's parents sold the family farm and moved to Kansas which had just been opened to settlement. There they lived for several years in a dugout, which was little more than a hole in the ground. Sod houses were for the wealthier pioneers. In rebuttal to those who described the lives of the prairie pioneers as desolate and forlorn, Gould wrote:

> "Please take it from one who knows, these were not an unhappy people, but joyous, singing, full of the zest of living. They were strong men and women, these early settlers on the plains, who looked the world in the face and took good and bad fortune in their stride. The timid never started, the weaklings never arrived".

The first crop of the pioneer family was ruined by the Kansas weather. Gould described what happened:

"To one who has never experienced Kansas hot winds, the words will convey little meaning. Day after day of burning, blistering wind from the southwest; wind that scorched the skin like a blast from a furnace; hot wind that dried up vegetation till the green leaves of the corn turned white, then rattled and blew away".

When he was nineteen, Gould decided to make his living as a school teacher. At first, Gould was plagued by doubts as to whether or not he was up to the job.

"That summer (1887) I decided to try teaching school. I had no education beyond that obtained in the country schools, equivalent, perhaps, to the eighth grade, but, on comparing myself with certain teachers whom I had met, I decided that I knew about as much as the average".

In late nineteenth century Kansas, school was mostly taught during winter months when children were free from farm chores. During the summers, schoolteachers were trained at State Normal Schools. It was during his second summer session at the Kansas State Normal School that Gould decided to become a geologist. He was inspired by a lecture titled "Geological Story of Kansas" given by a school administrator named L. C. Wooster. From that time on, Gould said "the idea was always in my mind that sometime, somehow, I must be a geologist."

Gould entered Southwestern College at Winfield, Kansas, in 1892, saying "I had enough of the joys of farm life to last me indefinitely". Of his time at college, Gould said: "It was here that I began to live". It took Gould seven years to finish his undergraduate education. He attended school until his money ran out, then worked as a schoolteacher until he could save enough to resume his college education. Describing his impoverished life as a student, Gould wrote: "my whole college career was a hand-to-mouth experience."

Around 1894, two years after his entrance to college, Gould determined that if he was to become a geologist he must do field work. He took the initiative to make several contacts and ended up doing summer field work for the next several years with a number of outstanding geologists and paleontologists. As a result of his work with these men Gould was already a highly trained and competent geologist at the time of his college graduation.

Gould's most influential mentor was paleontologist S. W. Williston who was then at the University of Kansas. When Gould told Professor Williston that he wanted to be a geologist, Williston at first tried to dissuade him, saying: "Its a dog's life, Gould". When he found that Gould was determined, he gave him the following advice:

> "Whatever you do or do not do, Gould, begin early to publish. It is up to you to take the world by the throat and make it recognize you."

In 1899, Gould graduated from college with a bachelor of science degree. Upon graduation, he set three goals for himself:

> "First, I resolved that I would some day occupy the chair of geology in some state university; second, I hoped to become state geologist of some state; and third, I determined to know as thoroughly as one might know, in the course of his life, the geology and mineral resources of the southern part of the Great Plains and the Southwest."

After graduation, Gould took a fellowship at the University of Nebraska where he undertook the classifying, sorting and naming of several thousand Dakota fossil leaves for Professor Erwin. H. Barbour. At the end of one year at Nebraska, Gould received a master of arts degree and was referred to the President of the University of Oklahoma, David Ross Boyd, by Boyd's secretary, George Bucklin. Gould's mother and Bucklin's mother were both enthusiastic members of the Women's Christian Temperance Union.

Gould interviewed in Norman during Christmas holiday, 1899, and arrived in Norman on June 10, 1900. Gould's first work in Oklahoma was not teaching, but leading a geologic field expedition before the start of fall classes. In those days, field work was done out of a horse-drawn covered wagon. Gould said "our chief concern was locating, each night, the three requisites of a good camp: grass, wood and water." On Gould's second night camping in Oklahoma, he was introduced to Oklahoma winds when a storm came by:

> "All four of us had to hang onto the tent poles for half an hour until the fury of the storm had passed. Some of the cook's dishes were found strung out for a quarter of a mile to the south".

Gould was pithy and sometimes dryly humorous in his description of the Oklahoma territory. There were three questions popular in Oklahoma at the time: Where are you from? What was your name back there? Why did you leave? Gould admitted that it was not always considered in the best of taste to insist upon an answer to the third question. When describing the town of Shawnee, Gould said that his most vivid memory was "that every second building on Main St. was a saloon." He described eastern Cleveland and Pottawatomie county as "rough and hilly, cut up with small streams and covered with scrub-oak and hickory timber", adding "the men chew tobacco and the women dip snuff."

Gould started teaching at the University of Oklahoma in the fall of 1900 for an annual salary of $400. At that time, the town of Norman had a population of 2,000. The University campus consisted of one building on 40 acres, seven faculty, and about 300 hundred students. Most of these students were engaged in prepatory work, only about 60 being of college rank. There was no equipment, no classrooms, no laboratories, no collections, and no library. Classes in geology were held wherever a room could be found; the enrollment in the largest class was nine.

During the winter of 1902, Gould took his first party of students to the Arbuckle Mountains in southcentral Oklahoma. Gould believed the Arbuckles to be one of the best places in the United States to study rocks first hand due to the existence of "all sorts and conditions of geological phenomena." In May of 1903, on Gould's third trip to the Arbuckles, the rock club was formed. The name of the club was later changed to the Pick and Hammer Club. Explaining his practice of taking students on geological field trips to the Arbuckles, Gould wrote:

"Many are the students who received their first geological inspiration on these trips. The geologist's laboratory lies out of doors. The chemist, physicist, or zoologist conducts his laboratory within four walls, but the geologist must go into the field and wear out sole leather on the rocks."

On the night of January 6, 1903, a fire totally destroyed the single building on the campus of the University of Oklahoma. All of Gould's scientific equipment was destroyed. His personal library of 200 books, instruments, reprints, field and lecture notes, more than a hundred boxes of specimens--all were lost. President Boyd rented buildings in downtown Norman, and classes continued.

In the spring of 1903, Gould undertook the investigation of groundwater resources in the southern parts of the Great Plains for the US Geological Survey. He wrote letters to various parts of the Oklahoma territory, trying to secure data on wells, springs, and streams. When the University closed in June, Gould began a field survey with four young men as assistants. They traveled in a covered wagon drawn by mules. Gould's seminal work on water resources would later be published as three US Geological Survey Water-Supply Papers, including Water-Supply Paper No. 148, "Geology and Water Resources of Oklahoma".

During the summer of 1903, Gould fell in love with University of Oklahoma student Nina Swan. Her father, Mr. Swan had been a minister and was then superintendent of the Oklahoma anti-saloon league. They had a quiet home wedding on Sept. 24, 1903. In the winter of 1904, Gould attended his first meeting of the Geological Society of America in St. Louis. Up to that time, Gould had met very few geologists. Upon seeing "a hundred or more at one time" he said that his first impression was that "geologists are the hairiest bunch of men I had ever seen."

Feeling the need for intellectual enrichment, Gould took an unpaid leave of absence from the University of Oklahoma during the 1905-1906 academic year. He enrolled at the University of Nebraska as a Ph.D student and, together with his young wife and infant child, embarked on a tour of eight of the greatest American Universities where geology was taught. Explaining his sojourn, Gould wrote:

> "My prime object was to get from the year's work as many things as possible that might aid me in teaching in Oklahoma. I was especially anxious to learn about those American universities which offered strong courses in geology, and to study at first hand the laboratory and classroom methods there employed."

Over the next few months, Gould visited Johns Hopkins, Harvard, Columbia, Yale, Cornell, the University of Michigan, the University of Wisconsin, and the University of Chicago. He met the country's leading geologists and studied their methods of teaching. Gould considered it to be the most profitable year he ever spent. At the end of the year, Gould received his Ph.D degree from Nebraska. His 178-page paper on the "Geology and Water Resources of Oklahoma" which had been published as U.S. Geological Water-Supply Paper No. 148 was accepted as a Ph.D thesis.

Gould returned to Oklahoma and teaching the winter of 1906-07. In the summer of 1907 he did his first consulting work as an oil field consultant, the work being available because "a few of the more progressive operators were learning that the geologists might be of some benefit in the location of prospective oil fields."

Oklahoma was on the verge of statehood, and a constitutional convention met in the fall of 1906 at Guthrie, Oklahoma. Gould personally knew several members of the constitutional convention and lobbied for the new constitution to include a provision for the establishment of a state geological survey. The provision was included in the new constitution; Oklahoma continues to be the only state with a constitution which provides for the establishment of a geological survey. Gould also drafted the law which implemented the constitutional provision, and later said: "The law is so worded that the state geologist can do almost anything he desires". The law was passed and signed by the governor on May 29, 1908. The Oklahoma Geological Survey was organized on July 25, 1908, with Gould being appointed as the first Director.

Around 1908 or 1909, Gould wrote a letter to the president of the State Board of Agriculture where he expressed concern that too much of the high plains was being put into cultivation. He said the soil was a very loose type and that if high winds broke out, it would eventually lead to dust storms. The reply was short and to the point: "You know nothing about agriculture. Please mind your own business". After years of overcultivation and poor land management, the dust bowl of the 1930s came and was one of the greatest environmental disasters of all time.

After assuming the Directorship of the Oklahoma Geological Survey, Gould stopped teaching but retained the title of Professor of Geology. In the fall of 1911, Gould resigned his position as Oklahoma State Geologist and went into private consulting. In addition to the lure of doubling his salary, Gould said that he was tired of fighting politicians, explaining "I have never possessed any More mild pour outs thereafter". After years of overcultivation and poor land management, the dust bowl of the 1930s came and was one of the greatest environmental disasters of all time.

After assuming the Directorship of the Oklahoma Geological Survey, Gould stopped teaching but retained the title of Professor of Geology. In the fall of 1911, Gould resigned his position as Oklahoma State Geologist and went into private consulting. In addition to the lure of doubling his salary, Gould said that he was tired of fighting politicians, explaining "I have never possessed any of the instincts of a politician, always preferring to work by direction rather than by indirection.". Offering his opinion of State Legislators, Gould later wrote:

> "A new bunch, mostly honest but woefully ignorant, come up to the legislature every two years. They are herded like sheep by a few ringleaders who know exactly what they want and how to get it, and are put away in their proper pigeon holes and told when to come out and vote."

Gould would spend 13 years as a consulting petroleum geologist. At that time, the science of petroleum geology was just beginning to be recognized. Gould explained:

> "In the early days of the oil industry, wells were located by guess, or hunches. One old oilman once told me that his favorite method of locating a well was to tie a tin can to a dog's tail and start the dog on a run across the prairie. Where the can came off, there he would drill."

It was during the first two decades of the 20th century that geologists began to recognize that there was a relationship between the surface conditions of rocks and the occurrence of petroleum in the subsurface. The theory that oil could be found by drilling anticlines was proposed, and was at first ridiculed, not only by oilmen but by many geologists. As time passed, however, the theory became accepted.

After two unsuccessful ventures forming private companies, Gould opened an office as a consulting geologist in the Colcord building in Oklahoma City where he worked until 1924. The tools of Gould and his colleagues were simple: a plane-table, telescope alidade, and stadia rod--these were the means of locating anticlines through geologic mapping.

Perhaps Gould's greatest oil and gas discovery was the Panhandle Field in Texas. Gould had first mapped the anticlinal John Ray Dome north of Amarillo in 1903 during his summer work for the US. Geological Survey. Gould sold the idea of developing the structure to a group of Amarillo merchants and Panhandle Ranchers. Before the first well was drilled, a ground-breaking ceremony was held which several of the local ranchers attended. Gould gave a short speech which started:

> "No one knows whether or not the Lord has put any gas or oil in the Panhandle of Texas, but if there should be any oil or gas in this part of the world, this would appear to be the best place to find it."

Afterwards, one of the cattle ranchers told him: "Gould, when you all made that little speech for we alls out there in Masterson's pasture, I couldn't quite decide whether you all was a mighty smart man or a damn bluffer." The well they drilled, Amarillo Oil Company No. 1 Masterson, was productive, and opened the world's greatest gas field to development.

Between the years of 1911 and 1924, Gould conducted examinations and prepared reports on 572 different properties. Explaining his philosophy, Gould said: "We well knew and as we always told our clients, the business of prospecting for oil or gas was first, last, and all the time a gamble." Later, Gould compared his experiences in college teaching with consulting:

> "My training had been largely academic and scientific, and it was a new experience to go up against the hard realities of business as it is practiced in this country. We used to classify the people who came to our offices as follows: first, businessmen; second, promoters; third, shysters; fourth, plain thieves. It is not always easy to distinguish between these classes of individuals."

In 1924, Gould was on a committee which unanimously picked Hugh D. Miser to be the new director of the Oklahoma Geological Survey. Miser turned the job down, preferring to remain at the U. S. Geological Survey. One of the other committee members, Frank Buttram, insisted that

Gould himself take the job. Gould was hesitant and asked why Buttram wanted him to do the job. Buttram explained:

> "I'll tell you exactly why; because the geological survey is your baby; because you were at the borning of the thing ; because you nursed it through its childhood, fought its battles, and licked its enemies."

Gould started his second term as Director of the Oklahoma Geological Survey on July 1, 1924. Gould's view was that "the principal work of a state geological survey is to find out all that is to be known about the geology and the mineral wealth of a state and to tell the world about it." His motto was "get as much geological information as possible to as many people as possible, in the shortest possible time, at the lowest possible cost". In 1931, the governor of Oklahoma vetoed the appropriation for the Geological Survey and Gould retired. In the seven years from 1924 through 1931 that Gould managed the Oklahoma Geological Survey, twenty-three geological bulletins were published. The most influential of these was the monumental work "Oil and Gas in Oklahoma" published in three volumes as Oklahoma Geological Survey Bulletin No. 40.

In 1935, at the age of 66, Gould undertook five years of geological work for the U. S. National Park Service. He covered eight southwestern states as regional geologist, advising the Park Service on topics such as road materials and water supplies. Gould finally retired in 1940. During his retirement he spent many happy hours trout fishing at his log cabin near the headwaters of the South Platte River in Colorado. On August 13, 1949, Gould passed away in Norman, Oklahoma, near the campus of the University of Oklahoma.

The magnitude of the contributions Gould made to the geology of the southwest is amazing in its quantity. In his lifetime, he published more than 250 papers and books. The breadth of Gould's contributions is also astonishing. He published papers in the areas of structural geology, stratigraphy, paleontology, hydrogeology, mineralogy, petroleum geology, and mining geology. He also wrote a geography textbook. The School of Geology and Geophysics was founded on Charles Gould's persistence, patience, and dedication--all of these, but above them all was Gould's love of geology.

> "Need there be surprise when the geologist stands in wonder before his discoveries in the rocks, awed by his own insignificance!"

Author's Postscript. After researching Gould's life, I felt the need to make some connection with him by visiting his grave. Gould is buried in the International Order of Odd Fellows (IOOF) Cemetery at 1913 N. Porter Street in Norman, Oklahoma. On a hot August afternoon, I tramped up and down the markers searching for Gould's final resting place. The brown grass crunched underneath my feet; it was 102 ºF. A little searching revealed a moderately large stone monument for Gould's parents, Anna and Simon Gould, who passed in 1920. Next to his parent's grave were small, rectangular markers for Gould and his wife. There are hardly any more modest gravestones in the cemetery than those for Gould and his wife. It was not surprising to me to find that Gould, a modest man, would place his parent's memory above his own. In perspective, Gould needs no profane monument of stone: his creations endure.

Gould's most influential mentor was paleontologist S. W. Williston, then at the University of Kansas. When Gould told Professor Williston he wanted to be a geologist, Williston tried to dissuade him, saying, "It's a dog's life, Gould." When he found that Gould was determined, he advised him, "Whatever you do or do not do, Gould, begin early to publish. It is up to you to take the word by the throat and make it recognize you."

In 1899, Gould graduated from college with a Bachelor of Science degree. Upon graduation, he set three goals for himself:

First, I resolved that I would some day occupy the chair of geology in some state university; second, I hoped to become state geologist of some state; and third, I determined to know as thoroughly as one might know, in the course of his life, the geology and mineral resources of the southern part of the Great Plains and the Southwest.

After graduation, Gould took a fellowship at the University of Nebraska, where he undertook no laboratories, and no collections. Classes in geology were held wherever a room could be found; the enrollment in the largest class was nine.

During the winter of 1902, Gould took his first party of students to the Arbuckle Mountains in south-central Oklahoma. He believed the Arbuckles to be one of the best places in the United States to study rocks first hand due to the existence of "all sorts and conditions of geological phenomena." In May 1903, on Gould's third trip to the Arbuckles, students formed the Rock Club. The name of the club was later changed to the Pick and Hammer Club. Explaining his practice of taking students on geological field trips to the Arbuckles, Gould wrote:

Many are the students who received their first geological inspiration on these trips. The geologist's laboratory lies out of doors. The chemist, physicist, or zoologist conducts his laboratory within four walls, but the geologist must go into the field and wear out sole leather on the rocks.

On the night of Jan. 6, 1903, a fire totally destroyed the single building on the campus of the University of Oklahoma. All of Gould's scientific equipment was destroyed. His personal library of 200 books, instruments, reprints, field and lecture notes, more than a hundred boxes of specimens—all were lost. President Boyd rented buildings in downtown Norman, and classes continued.

In the spring of 1903, Gould undertook the investigation of groundwater resources in the southern parts of the Great Plains for the U.S. Geological Survey. He wrote letters to various parts of the Oklahoma Territory, trying to secure data on wells, springs, and streams. When the University closed in June, Gould began a field survey with four young men as assistants. They traveled in a covered wagon drawn by mules. Gould's seminal work on water resources would be published as three US Geological Survey Water-Supply Papers, including Water-Supply Paper No. 148, Geology and Water Resources of Oklahoma.

During the summer of 1903, Gould fell in love with University of Oklahoma student Nina Swan. Her father had been a minister and was then superintendent of the Oklahoma Anti-Saloon League. They had a quiet home wedding on Sept. 24, 1903. In the winter of 1904, Gould attended his first meeting of the Geological Society of America in St. Louis. Up to that time, Gould had met very few geologists. Upon seeing "a hundred or more at one time," he said his first impression was that "geologists are the hairiest bunch of men I had ever seen."

Feeling the need for intellectual enrichment, Gould took an unpaid leave of absence from the University of Oklahoma during the 1905-1906 academic year. He enrolled at the University of Nebraska as a Ph.D. student and, together with his young wife and infant child, embarked on a tour of eight of the greatest American universities where geology was taught. Explaining his sojourn, Gould wrote:

My prime object was to get from the year's work as many things as possible that might aid me in teaching in Oklahoma. I was especially anxious to learn about those American universities which offered strong courses in geology, and to study at first hand the laboratory and classroom methods there employed.

Over the next few months, Gould visited Johns Hopkins, Harvard, Columbia, Yale, Cornell, the University of Michigan, the University of Wisconsin, and the University of Chicago. He met the country's leading geologists and studied their methods of teaching. Gould considered that year the most profitable he ever spent. At the end of the year, he received his Ph.D. degree from Nebraska. His 178-page paper, "Geology and Water Re-year, he received his Ph.D. degree from Nebraska. His 178-page paper, "Geology and Water Resources of Oklahoma," which had been published as U.S. Geological Water-Supply Paper No. 148, was accepted as a Ph.D. dissertation.

Gould returned to Oklahoma and teaching in the winter of 1906-07. In the summer of 1907, he did his first consulting work as an oil-field consultant. Work became available because "a few of the more progressive operators were learning that the geologists might be of some benefit in the location of prospective oil fields."

Oklahoma was on the verge of statehood, and a constitutional convention met in the fall of 1906, at Guthrie, Oklahoma. Gould personally knew several members of the constitutional convention and lobbied for the new constitution to include a provision for the establishment of a state geological survey. The provision was included in the new constitution and Oklahoma continues to be the only state with a constitution providing for the establishment of a geological survey. Gould also drafted the law that implemented the constitutional provision. Later he said: "The law is so worded that the state geologist can do almost anything he desires." The law was passed and signed by the Governor on May 29, 1908. The Oklahoma Geological Survey was organized on July 25, 1908, with Gould as the first director.

In 1908 or 1909, Gould wrote to the president of the State Board of Agriculture expressing concern that too much of the high plains was being put into cultivation. He said the soil was very loose and that high winds would eventually lead to dust storms. The reply was short and to the point: "You know nothing about agriculture. Please mind your own business." Years of overcultivation and poor land management led to the dust bowl of the 1930s, one of the greatest environmental disasters of all time.

After assuming the directorship of the Oklahoma Geological Survey, Gould stopped teaching but retained the title Professor of Geology. In the fall of 1911, he resigned his position as Oklahoma State Geologist and went into private consulting. In addition to the lure of doubling his salary, Gould said that he was tired of fighting politicians, explaining, "I have never possessed any of the instincts of a politician, always preferring to work by direction rather than by indirection." Offering his opinion of state legislators, Gould later wrote:

A new bunch, mostly honest but woefully ignorant, come up to the legislature every two years. They are herded like sheep by a few ringleaders who know exactly what they want and how to get it, and are put away in their proper pigeon holes and told when to come out and vote.

Gould would spend 13 years as a consulting petroleum geologist. At that time, the science of petroleum geology was just beginning to be recognized. Gould explained:

In the early days of the oil industry, wells were located by guess, or hunches. One old oilman once told me that his favorite method of locating a well was to tie a tin can to a dog's tail and start the dog on a run across the prairie. Where the can came off, there he would drill.

During the first two decades of the twentieth century, geologists began to recognize a relationship between the surface conditions of rocks and the occurrence of petroleum in the subsurface. The theory that oil could be found by drilling anticlines was proposed. At first it was ridiculed, not only by oilmen, but also by many geologists. As time passed, however, the theory became accepted.

After two unsuccessful ventures trying to form private companies, Gould opened an office as a consulting geologist in the Colcord building in Oklahoma City where he worked until 1924. The tools of his profession were simple: a plane-table, a telescope alidade, and a stadia rod—the means of locating anticlines through geologic mapping.

Perhaps Gould's greatest oil and gas discovery was the Panhandle Field in Texas. Gould had mapped the John Ray Dome anticline north of Amarillo in 1903 during his summer work for the US. Geological Survey. He sold the idea of developing the structure to a group of Amarillo merchants and Panhandle Ranchers. Before the first well was drilled, a ground-breaking ceremony was held which several of the local ranchers attended. Gould gave a short speech, which began:

No one knows whether or not the Lord has put any gas or oil in the Panhandle of Texas, but if there should be any oil or gas in this part of the world, this would appear to be the best place to find it.

Afterward one of the cattle ranchers told him, "Gould, when you all made that little speech for we alls out there in Masterson's pasture, I couldn't quite decide whether you all was a mighty smart man or a damn bluffer." The well they drilled, Amarillo Oil Company No. 1 Masterson, opened the world's greatest gas field to development.

Between 1911 and 1924, Gould conducted examinations and prepared reports on 572 different properties. Explaining his philosophy, Gould said, "We well knew and as we always told our clients, the business of prospecting for oil or gas was first, last, and all the time a gamble." Later, Gould compared his experience in college teaching with consulting:

My training had been largely academic and scientific, and it was a new experience to go up against the hard realities of business as it is practiced in this country. We used to classify the people who came to our offices as follows: first, businessmen; second, promoters; third, shysters; fourth, plain thieves. It is not always easy to distinguish between these classes of individuals.

In 1924, Gould was on a committee that unanimously picked Hugh D. Miser to be the new director of the Oklahoma Geological Survey. When Miser turned down the job, preferring to remain at the U. S. Geological Survey, one of the committee members, Frank Buttram, insisted that Gould take the job. Hesitant, Gould asked why Buttram wanted him to do the job. Buttram explained:

I'll tell you exactly why; because the geological survey is your baby; because you were at the borning of the thing; because you nursed it through its childhood, fought its battles, and licked its enemies.

Gould started his second term as director of the Oklahoma Geological Survey on July 1, 1924. His view was that "the principal work of a state geological survey is to find out all that is to be known about the geology and the mineral wealth of a state and to tell the world about it." His motto was, "get as much geological information as possible to as many people as possible, in the shortest possible time, at the lowest possible cost." In 1931 the governor of Oklahoma vetoed the appropriation for the Geological Survey, and Gould retired. In the years from 1924 through 1931, when Gould managed the Oklahoma Geological Survey, twenty-three geological bulletins were published. The most influential of these was the monumental "Oil and Gas in Oklahoma," published in three volumes as Oklahoma Geological Survey Bulletin No. 40.

In 1935, at the age of 66, Gould undertook five years of geological work for the U. S. National Park Service. He covered eight southwestern states as regional geologist, advising the Park Service on topics such as road materials and water supplies. In 1940, he retired. During his retirement he spent many happy hours trout fishing at his log cabin near the headwaters of the South Platte River in Colorado. On August 13, 1949, Gould passed away in Norman, Oklahoma, near the campus of the University of Oklahoma.

The magnitude of Gould's contributions to the geology of the Southwest is amazing. He published more than 250 papers and books. The breadth of his contributions is also astonishing. He published papers in the areas of structural geology, stratigraphy, paleontology, hydrogeology, mineralogy, petroleum geology, and mining geology. He also wrote a geography textbook.

The School of Geology and Geophysics was founded on Charles Gould's persistence, patience, and dedication, but above all, on his love of geology. Need there be surprise when the geologist stands in wonder before his discoveries in the rocks, awed by his own insignificance!

Author's Postscript. After researching Gould's life, I felt the need to make some connection with him by visiting his grave. Gould is buried in the International Order of Odd Fellows (IOOF) Cemetery at 1913 N. Porter Street in Norman, Oklahoma. On a hot August afternoon, I tramped up and down the markers searching for Gould's final resting place. The brown grass crunched underneath my feet; it was 102 °F. A little searching revealed a moderately large stone monument for Gould's parents, Anna and Simon Gould, who passed away in 1920. Next to his parent's grave were small, rectangular markers for Gould and his wife. There are hardly any more modest gravestones in the cemetery. It was not surprising to me that Gould, a modest man, would place his parent's memory above his own. In perspective, Gould needs no profane stone monument: his creations endure.

GOULD, CHARLES NEWTON (1868-1949). Charles Newton Gould, geologist, the son of Simon Gilbert and Anna Arvilla (Robinson) Gould, was born on July 22, 1868, on a farm near Lower Salem, Ohio. He and his sister received their early education in country schools. In 1887 the Goulds sold their farm and moved to Ninnescah (now Cunningham), in Kingman County, Kansas. Gould attended the Normal Institute for Teachers in Kingman, obtained a third-grade teacher's certificate, and taught his first year (1888-89) in Pratt County. He continued teaching in country schools until 1893, when he became grade-school principal at Ashland, Kansas. During the spring and summer terms he attended Southwestern College in Winfield, Kansas, and graduated with a bachelor of science degree in June 1899.

A lecture by L. C. Wooster, a school administrator and natural scientist, on the "Geological Story of Kansas" stimulated Gould's interest in geology, and he began collecting fossils and bones around Ashland. He sent many of his specimens to Samuel W. Williston, professor of geology at the University of Kansas, who encouraged him to pursue that profession. Gould did a year of graduate study under several leading geologists at the University of Nebraska and in June 1900 received his master of science degree. He was hired as a territorial geologist and geology instructor by the University of Oklahoma, where he organized the university's geology department and taught the first classes. During the summer months he worked with federal geological surveys in Indian Territory. He aided Joseph A. Taff in surveys of the Tahlequah quadrangle and the Arbuckle Mountains in 1901 and later prepared a map of the Wichita Mountains. On September 24, 1903, Gould married Nina Swan, who shared his interests and had worked for a time as his stenographer. They had a daughter and a son.

In the summer of 1903 the Hydrographic Branch of the United States Geological Survey commissioned Gould to investigate the geology and underground water resources west of Indian Territory and east of the Rocky Mountains. This included the water sources of the Canadian River drainage area in Texas. Traveling by horseback and covered wagon during three successive field seasons (1903-05), Gould and his colleagues became acquainted with the geological features of the Panhandle, which they mapped. Gould first named and recorded the Alibates dolomite flint ledges along the Canadian (see ALIBATES FLINT QUARRIES). He received his Ph.D. degree from the University of Nebraska in June 1906, and by 1907 his survey of the southern plains was completed.

Gould organized the Oklahoma Geological Survey in 1908. He retained his position at the University of Oklahoma until 1911, when he resigned from state work altogether and opened a consulting office in Oklahoma City. Soon many aspiring oilmen sought his services. Asked if there were any possible drilling sites in the Panhandle or in the vicinity of Amarillo, Gould remembered the anticlines, or domes, he had surveyed along the Canadian, and agreed to examine them. His reports led to the drilling of the Panhandle's first gas well by the C. M. Hapgood firm on Robert B. Masterson's ranch in 1918. Later Gould and Eugene S. Blasdel set the location for Gulf No. 2, which in 1920 resulted in the Panhandle's first successful oil well, on Samuel Burk Burnett's ranch in Carson County. The success of Gould's findings subsequently led to the Panhandle oil boom of the 1920s.

Gould's continuing geological studies of the Panhandle led him to coin the term "Amarillo Mountains" in 1922 for the buried granite ridge extending northwest from the Wichita Mountains across the Panhandle into New Mexico. In all, Gould spent thirteen years as a private consultant before beginning a second stint as a state geologist in 1924. In 1930 he and Jesse L. Nusbaum, director of the Laboratory of Anthropology at Santa Fe, identified the Alibates Flint Quarries as the source of Folsom weapon points. Between 1935 and 1940 Gould worked as a geologist for the National Park Service. During that time he turned out 251 reports that were used to help develop and upgrade tourist facilities in national parks and monuments throughout the Southwest. He died at Norman, Oklahoma, on August 13, 1949, and was buried there. His autobiography, Covered Wagon Geologist, which he wrote in 1946, was published in 1959.

BLASDEL, EUGENE SHERWOOD (1878-1930). Eugene Sherwood Blasdel, the son of Judson Sherwood and Anna (Jenness) Blaisdell, was born on November 16, 1878, in Champaign, Illinois. He was stricken with infantile paralysis at the age of nine and received only limited formal schooling. He developed an insatiable appetite for books and a love for recreation and the outdoors, and was able to walk again by the time he was twelve. In 1890 he moved with his family to Des Moines, Iowa, where his father established a grain business. He soon learned the financial aspects of agribusiness and in 1896 succeeded his father as manager of the Charles Counselman and Company grain elevator at Gowrie, Iowa. In 1898 he enrolled at Doane Academy, a branch of Denison University at Granville, Ohio. A year later he started his own business selling gasoline engines, then an innovation. In anticipation of joining the Klondike gold rush Blasdel moved in January 1901 to Seattle, where he worked as an engineer on fishing vessels. Both of these business ventures were curtailed by bouts with typhoid fever. After his second recovery in Seattle, Blasdel worked briefly as a reporter for the San Francisco Examiner and the Mercury. He returned to Iowa in November 1901 and became a traveling auditor for the Counselman firm. Acquaintance with Gov. Henry G. Blasdel in San Francisco motivated Eugene to modify his surname. He married Libbie Howard, a high school principal from Jefferson, Iowa, on May 2, 1904, and settled briefly in Chicago, where he worked at the Neola Elevator Company headquarters.

In October 1904 the Blasdels decided to move to Texas after noticing a land company's ad pushing the "golden opportunities" of the Panhandle. Upon arrival at Groom, Carson County, Blasdel established a lumberyard and with John Walter Knorpp as a partner opened the town's first bank. After Libbie's death on May 28, 1905, Blasdel sold out his interest in the bank to Knorpp. A year later he sold his lumberyard to A. C. Morgan, a lumber salesman from Elk City, Oklahoma. Blasdel then began speculating in land leases and built a small house in town for himself and his parents. For a time he worked for the National Bank of Commerce in Amarillo and in 1908 purchased a quarter-section farm three miles northwest of Groom, on which he built a granary.

To learn more about banking and the nature of Wall Street, particularly in relation to the recent panic of 1907, Blasdel took courses in composition and economics at the University of Chicago and business courses at the New York University School of Commerce, Accounts, and Finance. While in New York he worked briefly as a reporter for the Wall Street Journal and made several influential contacts, including one with John D. Rockefeller. He also visited several grain operations throughout the Midwest and Canada. On the train from Milwaukee to Chicago he met Kathleen Meiklejohn, a speech teacher. They were married at Waupun, Wisconsin, on June 2, 1909. They had six children, the oldest of whom died as a child.

The newlyweds returned to the farm near Groom, where Blasdel began raising wheat and kafir by a new method then called dry-tillage farming. This method proved fairly successful during a poor season, and in 1911 he sold the farm and started his own grain elevator in town. The following year he moved his family and business to Amarillo, where he established the Plains Grain Company and purchased an interest in several other elevators. Through his contacts in the outside market Blasdel sold a considerable amount of wheat abroad, particularly after the outbreak of World War I in 1914. He was said to have had the world corner on red top cane seed in 1916-17. In 1918, however, when the federal government ordered all domestic grain in storage to be moved to ports for shipment abroad, he liquidated his business in protest.

After a severe bout with influenza Blasdel began searching out the natural resources of the Panhandle, looking for possible deposits of clay for brick, sand for glass, gravel, copper, gold, oil, and gas. After the discovery of gas on the Masterson ranch in December 1918, Blasdel purchased Grover C. Bishop's interest in an expiring oil and gas lease on Samuel Burk Burnett's Four Sixes Ranch. With W. H. Fuqua and Pat H. Landergin (see landergin brothers) as partners, Blasdel secured a new contract with Burnett, hired Charles N. Gould to locate sites for wells, and brought in the Gulf Production Company to do the drilling. Their efforts paid off in 1920, when Gulf No. 1 Burnett began producing fifty million cubic feet of gas daily, and again on March 20, 1921, when Gulf No. 2 became the Panhandle's first successful oil well. The latter date coincided with the birth of Blasdel's youngest child, whom he named James Gulf in honor of the occasion.

With his new fortune Blasdel bought stock in various oil companies, obtained more oil leases, and invested in Amarillo real estate. Still maintaining an interest in the Groom Elevator Company, he also planned to resume his role as a grain dealer and erect more elevators. In addition he became a member of the Chicago Athletic Club and envisioned buying a seat on the Chicago Board of Trade. Often he took his family on extended vacations and camping trips. Blasdel was appointed United States food and fuel administrator for the Texas Panhandle and was president of the Amarillo School Board from 1919 to 1921. He also served a term (1923-24) as mayor of Amarillo and was a member of the Central Presbyterian Church there.

In the fall of 1929 a severe attack of bronchitis left Blasdel's health even more delicate, and the wishes of his family to remain in Amarillo influenced his decision not to reenter the grain business. On October 16, 1930, he died of a heart attack while he was hunting deer on a vacation with his wife and four of his children in the Blue Mountains near Springerville, Arizona. He was buried in Llano Cemetery, Amarillo.

Gould Hall bears the name of the founder of geological studies in Oklahoma and OU's first professor of geology, Charles Newton Gould, who was also the director of the Oklahoma Geological Survey. OU had one of the first schools of petroleum geology and petroleum engineering in the United States. Constructed in 1951, the building was furnished and equipped with donations from alumni and friends in the petroleum industry. Since the School of Geology and Geophysics moved to the Sarkeys Energy Center in 1986, Gould Hall has been occupied by the College of Architecture and its faculty offices, studios and classrooms.

(This story was written by Rev. S.W.Harkey D.D.)
The first Lutheran Minister that ever set foot in Illinois soil, was the Rev. Daniel Walcher, a licentiate of the Synod of North Carolina. He made a visit to this state in the summer of 1825, especially to the settlements of Union County, spending several months with these people, preaching for them in the German Language, Baptizing their children, and comforting them by the Word of God.
He traveled the whole distance from Carrabus County, North Carolina, and home again on horseback. I remember to have heard him preach in Carolina when I was a boy, and tell about the country and the people, and relate some of his adventures and "hair breadth" escapes, which he had made, especially in crossing rivers and swamps, and how one night he was compelled to camp out alone, having lost his way and unable to find a house, he and his faithful black horse, came near being devoured by wolves. Fortunately he came to a place where some one had camped the night before, and left some fire. A pack of wolves came and howled around him, and the only way he kept them off was by gathering sticks of wood and keeping a large fire blazing all night.
This man later moved to Montgomery County and lived on a farm, the adjoining the corporation of what is now the City of Litchfield,Ill. but then a wild prarie. He died and is buried not far from this place, Elmwood Cemetery-Land donated by the Walchers. I preached in a lone school house (standing on this same spot where this city of 5,600 inhabitants is now located (Litchfield)
Not long after Mr. Walcher left Union County, a European German Minister named Shoenberg, also from North Carolina, whom I remembered personally as having stayed for two weeks at my Father's home visited these people and became their Pastor. I think he was the first Lutheran Pastor to settle in this State, an educated man, had something of a library, and spent several years here preaching in the German Language. He had no family and after a time left his Library and some property and started down the Mississippi on a trip to New Orleans, intending to be gone some months, but he never returned and as far as I've been able to learn, no one knows what became of him.

(This story was written by Rev. S.W. Harsey 1949)

The first Lutheran Minister that ever set foot in Illinois soil, was the Rev. Daniel Wyleber, a Secretate of the Synod of North Carolina. He made a visit to this state in the summer of 1825, especially to the settlements of Union County, spending several months with these people, preaching for them in the German Language, Baptizing their children and comforting them by the Word of God.

He traveled the whole distance from Carrabus County, North Carolina, and home again on horseback. I remember to have heard him preach in Carolina when I was a boy, and tell about the country and the people, and relate some of his adventures and "hair breadth" escapes, which he had made, especially in crossing rivers and swamps, and how one night he was compelled to camp out alone, having lost his way and unable to find a house, he and his faithful black horse, came near being devoured by wolves. Fortunately he came to a place where some one had camped the night before, and left some fire. A pack of wolves came and howled around him, and the only way he kept them off was by gathering sticks of wood and keeping a large fire blazing all night.

This man later moved to Montgomery County and lived on a farm, the adjoining the corporation of what is now the City of Litchfield,Ill. but then a wild praire. He died and is buried not far from this place, Elmwood Cemetery-I and deeded by the Wyleber. I preached in a lone school house (standing on this same spot where this city of 5,000 inhabitants is now located (Litchfield)

HISTORY OF THE HEFLEY AND WALCHER FAMILY
(from the writings of Jesse L. Hefley--1st cousin of CDL Walcher.)

"For the pioneer urge had been strong in the Hefley's and the Walchers for generations. They had come, originally just two small families, from Germany and settled, along with a group of German families, in Pennsylvania. Family legend has it that an epidemic of some sort developed on board ship. The Hefley father died, leaving his wife and little boy; the Walcher mother also died, leaving her husband and two or three small children. Some time later, having arrived and settled in their new homes, the remaining parents married each other." In telling this story my mother (Aunt Clementine Walcher Hefley) would always end with, "and it was from that one little boy that all the Hefleys in America are descended. Be that as it may, the German colony, or a portion of it, migrated in a generation to North Carolina and thence to Illinois. Ant it was to Illinois, in Montgomery Co. that my father (Uncle Lemuel Hefley) returned after the Civil War, to select a bride from among the Walchers, and to settle down to farming, the traditional family vocation. It was there I was born, but my earliest recallections are of preparation for departure to a new land and a better life. Kansas had been much in the news, during the war and after;(1871) It seemed to be the frontier of the day--so to Kansas we were bound. Father, Mother, Henry, Hank and Jesse and a distant cousin of Mothers, Joe Rumpel. Took the ferry across the Mississippi at St Louis with wagon and team of horses. First settled in Howard Co. "We fared better than many of the settlers because my father was a hunter." The timber and creek bottoms abounded with game of many sorts. Father owned an old long squirrel rifle and he used it with great success. Much of the time we had a freshly killed carcass of deer hanging about the place--also wild turkey, squirrels, rabbits, quail, prairie chickens, ducks and geese all from time to time--paid tribute to his marksmanship. Fish too! Traded home and land in Howard Co. Kansas, to a roving preacher (Disciple Church or Campbellete), for a home in Woodson Co. (Belmont Kansas). Big white two story house and was postmaster there. (Great Uncle Lemuel Hefley) House also served as Wayside Inn. 1874---grasshopper year--swarms numbered in billions--ate everything in their path. I think the relatives were discovering that we had a big house. A brother of my mother, John Henry,(my grandfather), a minister of the Evangelical Lutheran Church (Missouri Synod) had been living and preaching in western Missouri and Eastern Kansas (Jefferson Co.) He died suddenly (Great Uncle Lemuel Hefley) House also served as Wayside Inn. 1874--grasshopper year--swarms numbered in billions--ate everything in their path. I think the relatives were discovering that we had a big house. A brother of my mother, John Henry,(my grandfather), a minister of the Evangelical Lutheran Church (Missouri Synod) had been living and preaching in western Missouri and Salem Kansas (Jefferson Co.) He died suddenly leaving a widow and five small boys and little in the way of support. (AMB and his brothers). They had drifted back to the family in Illinois and later to the Welker home near Perryville Missouri. For some reason Aunt Lucretia (Ferns grandmother, Elizabeth Lucretia Welker Walcher) determined to head west and arrangements were made for them to spend the winter with us. My father took his wagon and team and went over into Missouri to meet them and bring them home. Someone from the old neighborhood in Perryville, Mo. brought them part way. The clan was gathering and the big house was bulging. We boys who were old enough all went to a little school there in the bush about a mile from our village. John Walcher seemed not to have become discouraged by the grasshoppers experience and planned to go back to his Sumner Co. claim in the spring. There was unoccupied land there to be had for the taking, and a dollar and a quarter an acre due and payable fbefore the claim could be proved up. My fathers eyes glowed as the folks would sit around the fire and discuss the possibilities. John Walcher and Pa (Uncle Lem) went during the winter to see it. (Sumner Co.) He filed on a quarter section adjoining Johns place and came home determined to move in the spring. "We had two Albert Walchers with us now. One was John Walcher's boy and the other Aunt Lucretia's oldest boy, about 14, or five years older than I." He was already his mothers right arm and a real man in his household. (AMB Walcher). The two Alberts, having been brought together at our place, something had to be done to distinguish them, so they became, and so remained, Big Al and Little Al, based upon their ages. The Hefley's and John Walcher families along with U.S. Walcher, one of Aunt Lucretia's boys set out for Sumner Co. We had two wagons and 8 head of milk cows. U.S.came along to help with the cows. Aunt Lucretia and the rest of her family were to come later. Our nearest Post Office was South Haven (5 miles southeast) but Wellington was the county seat. It was 10 miles north and a little east. Both had been established only 2 or 3 years before. (1871) The railroads had not yet come closer than Wichita--so those little towns did not serve as marketing points for settlers crops. Aunt Lucretia Walcher and her boys came over from Woodson Co.,Kansas and were able to settle on a partially improved place near us. Our reports went back to Illinois and several more families came. The Blackwelders, the Granthams, the Poppewells, the Ridenours, the Whitakers and several other Walcher families--the Harkeys--All relatives or acquaintances from Montgomery Co. Illinois, moved in to increase our group. In time the whole community became known as the Illinois neighborhood. Buffalo bones were picked up, sold and shipped east to be ground into meal for fertilizer. (a means of livelyhood)--sold prairie chickens too and used also for food. Planted corn first spring by chopping slits in the ground with an axe and dropping in grains. It produced amazingly in the new sod without cultivation. Watermelons, canteloupe, pumpkins, squash, piemelons and citrons, planted like the corn, grew like weeds. We hauled them in by wagon loads, piled the surplus by the cow lot and fed it to the stock until mid-winter. Started a small orchard. Sent back to Illinois for Osage Orange seed (hedge) and planted small nursery patch--later to be transplanted and used as fences. Also served as windbreaks and shelter for small game and birds. In the fall of 1887 there was just nothing left to do but to sell out and give up our farm. We were deeply in debt--the farm having always been mortgaged. John A. Walcher took over the farm and its mortgages. John later did not want the farm and resold it to Charlie Walcher. After two or three years Charlie gave up and let the place go to his brother AMB. Big Al (AMB) was one of the few who never let the country lick him. The oldest of a family of five orphan boys, he worked hard and from early boyhood helped support himself and his brothers. He gave up most of the pleasures we other enjoyed in our youth, but his little place on the knoll across the creek prospered. While still a very young man he bagan to acquire these additional properties from families which had to give up. He took over the Barringer place across the road from us, a school section and several other farms in the community. He had little more cash than the rest of us, but could get most of the property by merely assuming a debt. Somehow he managed to make the payments and eventually came out on top. We Hefley's went to Arkansas City and from our Sumner Co. farm and then to Norman Okla.--still all unsettled except for the Indians.
